U.S. grant shrouded in controversy

by BILL HILL

Arlington Heights stands to lose $134,000 in community development funds if a controversial grant application that has divided the village board is not approved.

Both sides believe that more than $134,000 is at stake.

Those in favor of applying for the grant available under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 say that by applying this year, the village could receive as much as $1.7 million over the next five years. This could be used to take some tax pressure off village residents.

OPPONENTS counter that there may be strings attached to the grant and object to the requirement that the application must be accompanied by a housing assistance plan.

The community development act is a six-year program under which the size of the grants increase each year to eligible communities that apply for the grant.

Of 527 eligible communities, Arlington Heights and 15 others did not apply for the first-year entitlement funds of $125,000. The village therefore lost its chance to apply for $459,000 in the sixth year of the program.

A decision not to apply this year would have the effect of relinquishing the village's opportunity to apply for $459,000 in the fifth year of the program.

Because Arlington Heights is still considered a new applicant, the village may apply only for the first-year entitlement funds of $134,000 this year. Second-year funds total $295,000, third-year funds are $451,000 and fourth-year funds are $459,000.

MOTIONS TO apply for the funds were defeated by the village board Monday by 5-4 and 4-4 (one abstention) votes before Trustee August Bettman reopened the question and voted with grant supporters in favor of the village administration being directed to begin preparing the application in case the board's final decision is to apply for the funds.

Bettman said he voted with the grant's proponents only to have the matter considered further at a special meeting Jan. 12.

A final decision could come at tonight's special village board meeting. The deadline for submitting the application is Jan. 22.

The meeting begins at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 44 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 58's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, wanted for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said. Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

Pro...

Village Pres. James T. Ryan and other trustees in favor of applying for the community development funds see the money as a way to finance needed programs in the village without increasing local taxes.

"This is not a matter of our being able to reduce the federal budget," Ryan said. "If we don't take the funds, then some other community will get them. I'm concerned about taxes as far as the village is concerned and this can ease the tax situation here."

Village Trustee David Griffin said he favors applying for the funds but will not vote to do so unless a "more acceptable" housing-assistance plan is developed.

"WE'RE TALKING about a substantial amount of money — our money — that is being offered back to us by the federal government," Griffin said. "We lost $459,000 by not applying last year and we could lose $459,000 if we don't apply this year."

Trustees Frank Palmatier and Madeline Schroeder also are in favor of applying for the funds, mainly because of the programs that could be instituted in the village.

What programs the funds should be used for stirred disagreement.

Ryan and Palmatier both prefer to use the funds, at least the first year, for downtown improvements. Mrs. Schroeder agrees that downtown redevelopment "may return much more in the future," but also would like to see the board consider using the funds for

Con...

The reputation of the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development and the belief that the village does not have a specific need for community development funds are the main reasons the $134,000 grant is being opposed by some village trustees.

"HUD has not been able to keep firm control of its programs," Trustee Alice Harms said. "They have initiated programs with a good intent, but there have been times when they haven't appropriated enough money to supervise these programs. The regulations they issue, they don't have enough people to follow up on."

"I also feel rules and regulations will be made that we are not aware of," she said.

Trustee Robert Miller is also wary of HUD and its unspecified regulations.

"I WOULD like to see the village receive federal revenue and I'd like to see the village come up with a housing plan, but I don't want the two to be linked together and administered by HUD," Miller said. "The guidelines for the program also have not been spelled out. It's a gray area when you're dealing with HUD."

Miller also said the village does not have sufficient time to come up with a housing plan "we want to live by." A survey of businesses in the community should be conducted first to determine the incomes of Arlington Heights workers and how many would prefer to live in the village, he said.

$1,530 in items taken at apartment

About $1,530 worth of jewelry and other items was reported stolen early Sunday after a break-in at the Louise Revell apartment, 115 E. Davis St., Arlington Heights.

Taken were a leather coat, two diamond rings, sapphire necklace, topaz ring and opal ring, pin, bracelet and earrings, police were told.

Burglars ransacked all the rooms of the house after forcing open a rear door sometime between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 1 a.m. Sunday, police said.

Rent boycott looms at Mallard Lake

More than 470 residents of Mallard Lake Apartments in Wheeling say they are planning a rent boycott next month to protest poor living conditions in the complex. Karen Henning, a resident at the complex and an organizer of the boycott, said owners of the complex have turned off heat in the hallways to save money. She said the owners, Celsel and McGuire Industries, "pulled out" wires in the heating system several weeks ago, leaving hallways with freezing temperatures. The complex management has refused to comment on the matter.

Shop owner foils burglary

Alfred Wood, who was concerned about marks left by someone tampering with the lock to his business Thursday, spent the night in his welding shop garage Friday night and caught one burglary suspect. Wood told police he was awakened about 9:30 a.m. Saturday by noises at the garage door of Rad Wood Service, 1222 Harding Ave., Des Plaines. Wood chased two suspects after one of them entered and saw Wood inside. Wood fired a warning gunshot into the air, stopping one suspect while the other escaped. Wood ordered one of the suspects to drive him to the police station. The second suspect gave himself up later. Arrested in the attempted burglary were two Des Plaines men, Craig A. Busch, 17, of 1312 Perry St., and John C. Thompson, 28, of 1408 River Rd.

Herald photographer wins award

Seeling was cited for his enterprise and initiative in developing several photo features last month, including photo essays on Bobby Libit Day in Buffalo Grove and Christmas in Elk Grove Village, and photos of sign language dancers.

In addition to Seeling's award several other staff members received recognition for enterprise during December.:

- Diane Mermigas, for the almost daily feature stories centering on the Mount Prospect, Wheeling and Des Plaines area.

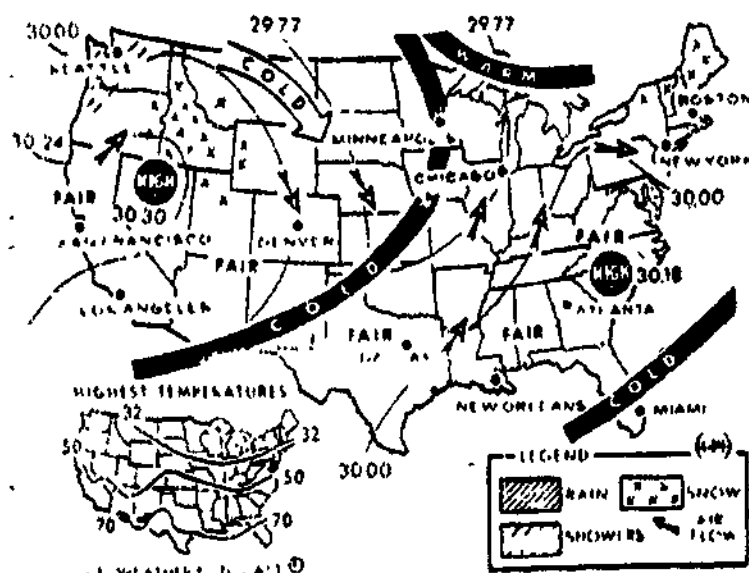

• The city staff of the Arlington Heights Herald for complete coverage of the U.S. Supreme Court's acceptance of the Viatorian case.

- Mike Klein for his increasingly interesting column.

- Jim Frost for initiative in developing a photo feature on Christmas for the Indians.

Teachers who received scholarships

Grant recipients may get a break

Teachers who received state scholarships during college but are unable to find teaching jobs may be relieved of their debt, according to guidelines being written by the Illinois Office of Education.

The teacher education scholarship was a popular means of financial aid on college campuses in the 1960s and early 1970s. The state paid the tuition of students who received scholarships as long as they agreed to teach in Illinois following graduation. If they did not teach they were required to pay back the money with 5 per cent interest

The scholarship was designed to encourage students to enter the teaching profession, but when the teaching market became glutted, scholarship recipients had difficulty finding jobs.

In 1973 the Illinois General Assembly made the program more lenient, giving students five years to fulfill the requirement. Last summer the legislature passed another revision giving the Illinois Office of Education power to void some of the scholarship debts.

Thomas Denny, scholarship coordinator in the state office, said persons most certain to be excused from payment would be those who have been unable to find a teaching job, those whose job has been eliminated because of financial cutbacks, or those who could not enter the teaching profession for health reasons.

Denny said the state office may also expand the number of jobs that would fulfill the obligation. Other "people-oriented" jobs besides teaching may be accepted, Denny said, citing jobs in the mental-health field as an example.

Control of schools topic of meeting tonight

Who should control the schools?

This will be the topic of a panel discussion at 7:30 p.m. today involving State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights; Jonathon Howe, attorney, school board president, and member of the executive committee of the Illinois Assn. of School Boards; and David Tomczek, a regional director of the Illinois Education Assn. a

The panel discussion, sponsored by the Northwest Cook County Chapter of the education honorary organization, Phi Delta Kappa, will be moderated by Wayne Scheible, superintendent of Schaumburg Township Dist. 84. The public is invited to attend the meeting at Lincoln Junior High, 700 W. Lincoln St., Mount Prospect.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

Rare disease nearly killed JFK

MIAMI, FLA. (UPI) — John F. Kennedy, whose image as a robust, youthful man was a political asset, suffered from a rare blood disease that nearly killed him three times before he became President, the National Enquirer reported Sunday.

Quoting sources such as Kennedy's mother, Mrs. Rose Kennedy, his brother-in-law Sargent Shriver, and family friends, the copyrighted article, condensed from a book entitled "The Search for JFK" by Joan and Clay Blair Jr., said Kennedy suffered from Addison's disease, an illness considered fatal until the late 1930s.

Kennedy's political associates, friends, family and doctors kept the illness secret because, the article quoted Shriver as saying, "In that period, in the 1950s and 1960s, if you put out a statement that Jack Kennedy had Addison's disease everybody would have said, 'He's going to die.'"

Shriver reportedly said his wife, Eunice, also suffers from the same disease which is treated with cortisone and doca, a synthetic drug which makes up for a deficient secretion of the adrenal gland.

The article also quoted Dr. Elmer C. Bartels, now retired, of the Lahey Clinic in Boston, as saying Kennedy was born with an "unstable back" which was the cause of serious back problems throughout the years. The back pains were publicly attributed to old football injuries that became aggravated after Kennedy's World War II combat experiences aboard the PT-109.

The authors said the disease almost killed Kennedy three times:

• After learning he had the disease

while in England in 1947, "the serious" Kennedy, then a Congressman, was sent home by ocean liner. Frank Waldrop, described as a friend and former editor of the Washington Times Herald, was quoted as saying Kennedy received "extreme unction," or last rites of the Catholic Church, at the time.

• Referring to a passage from Robert Kennedy's book, "As We Remember Him," describing JFK's near fatal illness on Okinawa in 1951, the article said that episode was also caused by the disease.

• On Oct. 21, 1964, Kennedy underwent a serious back operation but severe infection attributed to his weakened condition almost killed him, "He nearly died," Rose Kennedy is quoted as saying. "He received the last rites."

The authors said they believe Kennedy was able to get into the military "as a result of string-pulling by his father. Joseph P. Kennedy used his influence with an old Wall Street friend, Under Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal."

Lebanon fighting called worst in 9 months of war

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian guerrillas gave in to an army ultimatum Sunday to free 20 captive soldiers and 10 armored vehicles or face a possible army attack on their camps.

Fighting, the fiercest yet in Lebanon's nine months of civil war between rival Christian, Moslem and Palestinian forces, spread north from Beirut to Tripoli and claimed at least 60 dead and about 110 wounded over the past 24 hours, police said.

The estimated toll from nine months of civil war rose to about 8,360 dead and 17,760 wounded.

Witnesses said about 500 Palestinian guerrillas surrounded a convoy of 10 tanks and personnel carriers attempting to transport food to two refugee camps under siege by Christian forces, wounding three soldiers and capturing 20.

The army command threatened to send troops in to retake the armored vehicles and the soldiers by force if they were not released within 12 hours.

A Palestinian spokesman said that about half the convoy was released shortly after midnight and the other half a few hours later. A military spokesman said that as of 1 a.m. Monday all of the men and eight of the armored vehicles had been returned.

"We are still awaiting the return of two vehicles and the soldiers' weapons but the affair looks much better now," he said.

The incident threatened to touch off the biggest crisis in Lebanese-Palestinian relations since 1978, when the guerrillas kidnaped two soldiers and the army declared martial law and bombed and shelled the camps around Beirut for one month.

The heaviest fighting still raged in the suburbs of Beirut where Christian Phalangists using armored cars pushed southwest around Palestinian lines to within 500 yards of the Jisr Al Pasha refugee camp.

But fierce fighting also continued throughout most other parts of the shell-shattered capital, from the sand-bagged squares around the city center to the uptown coastal hotel district where Moslem and Christian gunmen traded machinegun and rocket fire from opposing positions in the Holiday Inn and Phoenix hotels.

Official cites Concorde hazards

Reserve fuel supply unacceptable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An air traffic control official entered the Concorde controversy Sunday with a warning that the Anglo-French supersonic transport "can only raise threats to the safety of American airways."

John Leyden, president of the U.S.

Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, leveled the new charge in a report saying the Concorde should be banned from the United States for three reasons:

• Air France flights from Paris to Washington would be dangerously near the 3,650-mile distance which French aviation spokesman have described as the SST's maximum operational flight range.

• Concorde fuel capacity is "unacceptably low" because, according to the French ministry for civil aviation, the SST would arrive at Washington on flights from Paris with reserve fuel for only 35 minutes of flight, well below Federal Aviation Administration requirements of enough fuel to fly on to an alternate field and hold for 45 minutes.

• A senior official of Air France has confirmed the plane would operate in U.S. airspace at times when traffic already is the heaviest, requiring special handling and — in cases where fuel is particularly low on incoming flights — disrupting domestic schedules.

"Under ordinary circumstances we would have no hesitancy in recommending admission to the United States of a technically superior supersonic plane," Leyden said in a statement asking his executive board to urge that Transportation Secretary William Coleman Jr. ban the Concorde.

"The Concorde, however, on the basis of the testimony of its own managers and strongest supporters, can only raise threats to the safety of the American airways."

Air France and British Airways are seeking permission for six round-trip flights a day linking Paris and London with Washington and New York. Coleman has promised to rule on the controversial request by Feb. 4.

Leyden issued his statement in Washington if adopted at a PATCO board meeting in Las Vegas this week, it will represent stiff opposition to Concorde from a union representing 15,000 flight controllers.

Most of the previous opposition to the new SST has come from environmental groups concerned about the plane's noise, its pollution and the possibility it might deplete the upper atmospheric ozone layer.

But Leyden concentrated on its fuel limitations and potential need for special handling, and he warned:

"The Concorde will throw a heavy burden on the American air traffic control system at the very time that the American public has become aware of the 'near miss' situation, resulting as it does from heavy traffic and insufficient personnel and equipment in the towers and air traffic centers," Leyden said.

"We believe the Concorde flights to America, under the conditions outlined by its sponsors, is a definite threat to our air safety which we cannot condone or overlook."

Kelley thinks left-wingers bombed LaGuardia

FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley said Sunday he suspects — but has no proof — that left-wing terrorists were responsible for the bombing that claimed 11 lives at LaGuardia airport in New York Dec. 29. Kelley acknowledged that the culprit could be a "mad bomber," but added "my feeling is, and this is my experience and the experience of my associates, that in all probability it was a terrorist activity." He identified terrorist groups in the United States as representing "the political philosophy of the so-called, in the late 1960s, the new left — the Weathermen and others of that stripe."

Postal Service probes futuristic delivery

Rapid loss of business to private competitors has forced the U.S. Postal Service to speed up research into electronic mail service and other futuristic delivery techniques, a senior postal official said Sunday. "We are actively preparing ourselves for counter-measures" to recover much of the mail delivery market lost because of increasing postage rates, Assistant Postmaster General J. T. Ellington said in an interview. "It could range from facsimile messages to mass transmission of printed matter by satellite," he said.

U.S. Supreme Court returns to work

The Supreme Court ends a four-week holiday recess and resumes public sessions Monday, its docket loaded with important legal issues that will test the judicial philosophy of new Justice John Paul Stevens. The list of arguments for the next two weeks include the rights of women to pregnancy benefits under employee medical plans, whether the federal government can be forced to back low-income housing projects in the suburbs, and whether aliens can be barred from government employment.

Hunt for hotel victims suspended

A search for more victims of a powerful Fremont, Neb. explosion that shattered the Pathfinder hotel and killed at least 11 residents was suspended Sunday because officials feared the lives of rescue workers were in danger. Police authorities said more than 40 persons were injured with 14 still hospitalized and 10 persons missing.

Bombs sent to San Francisco officials

San Francisco's two most powerful supervisors found bombs in candy boxes received by mail at their homes during the weekend, police reported Sunday. The explosives were turned over to authorities, and neither politician was injured. Officials said the bombs arrived by mail Saturday at the homes of John Barbagelata, who is paying for a recount in the mayoral election he lost by a narrow margin, and Quentin Kopp, president of the Board of Supervisors.

Train receives death threat from Fromme

Lynette Fromme, serving a life sentence for trying to kill President Ford, sent a death threat letter from prison to Russell Train, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, authorities disclosed Sunday. Officials said Miss Fromme's letter reached the EPA chief in Washington Jan. 2.

Quiet coup successful in Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — The leaders of the armed forces overthrew President Guillermo Rodriguez Lara early Sunday in a coup that waited until after the President's daughter was married at the presidential palace.

The takeover was so quiet that most of the nation was unaware of it.

The junta took the title Supreme Governing Council and included navy Vice Adm. Alfredo Poveda, army Gen. Guillermo Duran and air force Gen. Luis Leoro. Poveda will be chairman.

The junta declared a curfew in Quito and established martial law throughout the oil-rich, Colorado-sized South American country of eight million persons.

The transfer of power came as most of the 300,000 inhabitants of the Andean capital were asleep and there were no reports of violence.

The three military chiefs had been known as backers of Rodriguez Lara. Political sources said the change of government appeared to be part of a strategy to avoid violence.

The coup followed months of rising prices and weeks of scattered incidents, including disorders last week in Cuenca, 190 miles south of Quito, where two persons were killed and six injured.

Rodriguez Lara, his government plagued by economic problems, a cabinet crisis and rumors of an impending coup, said in his resignation statement he left the presidency "under no pressure whatsoever from the armed forces."

'A victim is hit and he is stopped'

Police here using controversial bullets for years

3 types of pistols allowed by cops

The Arlington Heights Police Dept. has authorized three types of pistols for use by its personnel. Two of the three types use the hollowpoint ammunition.

Officers may use either a .38-caliber revolver or the .357 caliber revolver, both of which utilize .38-caliber hollow-point bullets.

Authorization was recently given for the use of 9 mm automatic pistols. Proponents of the automatic contend it is a faster, more efficient weapon than the revolver. Officers, however, must undergo special additional training before they can carry the automatic pistol.

OFFICERS MAY carry an additional weapon besides their service revolver. Although the extra pistol is permitted, no regulations have been established governing them.

Most officers who choose to carry another gun often select a small pistol that can be tucked inside their belt for use in case they are disarmed.

However, two incidents of policemen being wounded were the results of officers accidentally shooting themselves with the extra gun. In both cases they were shot in the hand.

In addition to the pistols, the department has a back-up arsenal of shotguns, rifles and semi-automatic weapons.

THE DEPARTMENT recently traded its .45-caliber Thompson sub-machine gun for two civilian models of the M-16 used by American troops in Vietnam.

Capt. Maurice English said the new guns, AR-15's are lighter, more accurate and safer while not having the psychological impact of the "tommy-gun."

"We're looking for safer weapons, more efficient ones. It's the safety of the general public we are concerned about," English said.

by LEE SWICKARD

While the Chicago Police Dept. was embroiled in controversy about whether to issue their men hollow-point ammunition, the Arlington Heights police force quietly made the switch to the bullets two years ago.

The reason for the change in both departments was safety and the "stopping power" of the hollow-point slugs over the traditional pointed rounds.

"It's the safety factor. They protect bystanders and the public at large," said Capt. Maurice English of the Arlington Heights Police Dept.

"There is no ricochet. With this, it stops once it hits something," English said of the standard issue .38-caliber hollow-point bullet.

BEFORE THE hollow-nose bullets were issued by the department, the men on the force could choose their own ammunition. The choices, English said, were often high velocity .38-caliber bullets or .357-caliber bullets with magnum loads.

The .357-caliber magnum packs a great deal of power at high speeds, English said. Despite the magnum's power, it does not match the "stopping power" of the hollow-point bullet, English said.

It is the stopping power of the hollow-nose bullet that attracts the policemen and frightens some law-abiding citizens.

Just about any wound from the hollow-point bullet is potentially fatal because the bullet expands as it enters the body, tearing great, gaping holes. A victim is hit and he is stopped — hence the term "stopping power."

The terms "hollow-point" and "dum-dum" are often erroneously used interchangeably by the public, said David Hamlin, executive director of the Illinois Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Hamlin said the dum-dum is a bullet with its point sawed off at an angle, while the hollow point resembles a regular bullet that has been "cored like an apple."

OPPONENTS OF the hollow-point bullets refer to the Geneva Convention of the 1920s which banned dum-dums from warfare. But Hamlin said the treaty was not meant to apply to the police force of Peoria, Ill.

While terming the hollow-points "an ugly bullet," Hamlin said, "We neither support nor oppose their use."

He said the real question is not the ammunition, but rather the circumstances under which a policeman may draw and fire his weapon.

Illinois statutes allow policemen to use fatal force when their lives or the lives of others are threatened or in order to stop a suspect fleeing from a forcible felony. It is the "fleeing felony" portion that bothers Hamlin.

"Basically, a policeman can shoot at someone running away. That's far too lax a standard. The successful use of fatal force voids the Constitution lock, stock and barrel," he said.

HAMLIN SAID the Federal Bureau of Investigation authorizes the use of weapons in situations of life-or-death or the threat of great bodily injury.

In Arlington Heights, officers may use their weapons in accord with the state standards, and Hollywood's depiction of a policeman shooting the weapon from a criminal's hand or the firing of warning shots is inaccurate.

"When a policeman takes out his gun, he better mean to kill. He has no business taking out his weapon unless he intends to kill someone," Police Chief L. W. Calderwood said.

Arlington Heights policemen have shot two suspects, one fatally, in the department's history.

The fatality was an armed robbery suspect who pointed a pistol at a policeman armed with a shotgun.

THE WOUNDED suspect was shot as he ran from a burglarized doctor's office. The bullet, a .357-magnum, passed through his body and he fled only to be arrested in a hospital emergency room.

Hamlin said a federal study of the two types of ammunition indicates a great safety factor when the hollow-point bullets are used.

However, he said the national trend to the bullets is opposed by the Los Angeles Police Dept. The Los Angeles chief, Hamlin said, will not authorize them because he said most shot policemen have been shot with their own weapons.

"I cannot be sure of his statistics, but it does say something about the effect of that ammunition," Hamlin said.

'Odd Couple' staged at Forest View

Neli Simon's play, "The Odd Couple," will be performed by students at Forest View High School this week.

The play will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, 8 p.m. Saturday and 2 and 8:30 p.m. Sunday in the theater of the school, 2121 Goebbert Rd., Arlington Heights. A matinee for students will be presented Friday. Tickets will be $1 on Thursday and Friday and $1.50 on Saturday and Sunday.

The comedy, depicting the story of two divorced men living together in New York City, will be directed by Jeff Lovell, assisted by Terry Conway. Bob Stolk is the designer and technical director.

The school chorus is sponsoring a spaghetti dinner Sunday at 1 and 5:30 p.m. in combination with the play. Dinner, entertainment by the chorus, and the play is being offered as a package for $5 for adults and $3 for children under high school age.

Tickets for the dinner-theater are available from any chorus member or may be purchased by calling the school at 437-4800, ext. 276.

Hearing tonight on Dist. 25 rolls

The impact of declining enrollment in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 will be discussed in a public hearing tonight and by the board of education in a committee-of-the-whole meeting Wednesday.

Consultants hired by the board have recommended the closing of several schools during the next 10 years along with a possible increase in taxes, increase in class size and reduction in the teaching staff.

Enrollment in Dist. 25 is expected to drop 31 per cent by 1984, which would mean a $3.9 million financial deficit that year due to the resulting drop in state aid.

FOLLOWING THE presentation of the consultant's report to the board in November, the board scheduled eight public meetings to present the report to the members of community and solicit their response. The last of those meetings will be held today at 7:30 p.m. at South Junior High School, 314

S Highland St., Arlington Heights.

The board will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday as a committee-of-the-whole to discuss information gained from the public meetings and begin to sort through the enrollment and financial data. Discussion on the impact of declining enrollment on the district is expected to continue for several months before the board makes a final decision.

The board is scheduled to meet in the administration center, 301 W. South St., but the meeting may be moved to South Junior High School to accommodate a crowd.

The local scene

A photography workshop for Arlington Heights youths in fifth through eighth grades will be conducted by the Arlington Heights Memorial Library and area 4-H clubs.

The six-week workshop will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays Jan. 27-March 2.

There is no fee for the workshop, but participants must have a camera and pay film and processing fees.

Instruction will be given in picture composition, how a camera works and camera shooting techniques. There will also be a meeting with Herald photographer Dom Najolia as the guest speaker and a darkroom demonstration.

Persons wishing to register for the workshop may do so at the Children's Dept. of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton, Arlington Heights. Additional information is available by calling 398-6769.

Postal worker honored

Donald Hall, the Buffalo Grove mailman who pulled two children from an icy lake Dec. 3, Thursday was awarded the Outstanding Citizen Award of the Rotary Club of Arlington Heights.

Hall, who lives in Wheeling, was walking his route in The Crossings development when he responded to a faint call for help. He waded chest high into the ice encrusted waters to save the lives of Jacob Aldlin, 4, and his sister, Lisa, 6.

Portrait demonstration set Heien March, president of the Arlington Heights Art Guild, will give a portrait demonstration at the guild's Thursday meeting at 8 p.m. at Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 1234 N. Arlington Heights Rd.

Mrs. March has art degrees from Kent State, Cleveland Art School, Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh and the Palmet and Chisel Academy, Chicago.

Dance show set at Arlington High

Arlington High School's dance show, "Mirror of the Soul," will be presented by students this week in the school's Bristol theatre, 502 W. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights.

The show will be presented Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. tickets are $1.50. On Wednesday students will give a free performance at area homes for the elderly.

The show includes "A Force," a dance from the movie "Jaws," day through Saturday at 8 p.m. Tickets will give a free performance at area choreographed by Janet Luncheon, a dance done on ladders by Joan Ulrich and Beth Bunting, "Malignant Growth" by Brianna Wiebe and "Aviary Experience" by Linda Mystrom.

Truman-MacArthur feud

Old Soldier's last battle recalled

Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.

Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman? That is for American historians to decide.

More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star

U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.

IT WAS NEWS this week.

On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Misourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide Col. Laurence Bunker.

Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.

"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.

Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.

Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.

"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.

"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.

"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."

Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June 1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.

"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.

Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.

"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.

MacARTHUR thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."

The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.

Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."

Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearcut winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate.

"You're involved with a military principle," Showers said. "Would it (an escalated American effort in Korea, as MacArthur wished) have brought the Chinese and Russians in full blast?"

"TRUMAN WAS the guy responsible for making a decision. He had to say no to MacArthur," said Showers.

So Douglas ("Old soldiers never die; They only fade away") MacArthur came up against Harry ("The buck stops here") Truman.

And the debate still rages over who won that battle of American heavyweights.

Area man arrested after kicking cop

An Arlington Heights man was arrested early Saturday after he allegedly kicked a Mount Prospect police sergeant in the face during a disturbance at Pier One Hundred restaurant, 100 E. Prospect Ave., police said.

Paul C. Boul, 28, of 12 S. Phelps Ave., was charged with battery, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

Police responded to a report of a disturbance about 1:15 a.m. at the restaurant. Boul was asked to leave and he allegedly shouted obscenities at policemen, police said.

Sgt. Dennis Leonard told Boul he was under arrest, and Boul pushed Leonard and kicked him in the face, police reported. Leonard was not hospitalized.

Boul was released posting $1,000 bond pending an appearance Feb. 18 in the Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

senior citizens' needs or anti-vandalism programs.

Ryan and Palmatier also agree that the requirement that a housing-assistance plan be filed with the application should not deter the village from applying for the funds.

"I DON'T think the requirements of HUD (Dept. of Housing and Urban Development) are onerous or obnoxious enough that the funds should be turned down," Ryan said.

"The figures that we would be using, as far as our housing needs, are figures that are in existence anyway," he said. "I don't think that it is a valid argument that because we're putting the figures together that we're demonstrating our needs."

"I feel there is little or no hazard to the village in filing a housing-assistance plan," Palmatier said. "The greatest hazard on the low-and moderate-income housing is by the court route. If we develop a policy of scattered housing it would be better than sitting idly by."

Mrs. Schroeder agreed that the planning should be done.

"Sometime in the future, as part of the metropolitan area, we will have to accept a certain percentage of low-and moderate-income housing," she said. "We should do the planning ahead of time instead of having it imposed on us."

and August Bettman questioned statements in the housing assistance plan presented Jan. 5 by the housing commission.

"No one will make me believe that 71 per cent of the work force in Arlington Heights earns less than $10,000 a year," Bettman said. "I think the facts worked up could have all kinds of holes shot in them."

Durava called the housing plan inaccurate. "It was the same one we threw out a year ago," he said.

OPPONENTS of the community development grant are also against accepting the funds without a specific use for them in mind.

"I am basically against applying for any federal funds," Bettman said. "It's a kind of giveaway that our country can't afford. People still have to pay for these government handout programs."

Bettman, chairman of the downtown improvements committee, said he will vote to apply for the grant only if the board can agree that the funds should be used for downtown improvement projects.

Durava doesn't have a favorite project, but agrees "there should be a definite, proven need for the funds."

"To take money and then try to find a way to use it is criminal," he said. "That isn't the way government should operate."

"If we need that money so desperately for these projects then they should have been given serious consideration in our budget-making the past few years," said Mrs. Harms. "If we didn't feel it was essential enough to put in the budget then there's not a real need, just a wish."

The way we see it

Board doesn't need expenses

It's hard to sympathize with members of the Cook County board who last week lost their $100-a-month expense reimbursement in a budget-cutting move by County Board Pres. George W. Dunne.

The county board members collect their $25,000 salaries even though almost all of them hold other jobs. Losing the expense allowance hardly seems to be a major sacrifice for the board members and will set a good example of thrift for the county.

However, we are more than a little skeptical about the statement made by Dunne when the budget cut was made that he would decide whether county commissioners' expenses were necessary and would see that they would be reimbursed for "necessary and reasonable" expenses.

It is possible, as Republican county board members said last week, that Dunne will make decisions on reimbursement unfairly, favoring his fellow Democrats and penalizing the Republicans who are a minority on the board.

It is also possible, since the amount of expense reimbursement is no longer limited by county ordinance, that Dunne will end up approving more than $100 a month in "necessary and reasonable" expenses for some commissioners. In that case the budget cut will be no budget cut at all.

It would have been better if the county board had eliminated the expense account reimbursement system entirely. Or, if having no expense reimbursement at all was intolerable to the commissioners — as we expect it might be — they could have cut their monthly allowance from $100 to, say, $25 a month.

Either action would have been preferable to handing over payment discretion to one person.

Of course the action we would prefer would be to eliminate those expense accounts altogether.

Chou En-lai: a man who built a bridge

If Chou En-lai had died five or ten years ago, we would probably have had little good to say about this man, one of the handful of powerful leaders who created modern China.

But in the past few years, Chou has been regarded by many as the key Chinese architect of better relations between China and the United States.

Once regarded as one of the faceless Communist enemy, Chou met with Henry Kissinger in 1971 to help open the way for detente between the two nations. Without his contributions, our uneasy relationship with China might be nothing more than the dream of visionaries.

History will offer, of course, the final critique on the accomplishments of this man who was first an enemy and then a friend of the United States. However, he is judged by the world, of one thing we can be certain — his achievements will not quickly fade from the minds of the people of China.

Chou En-lai

The lighter side

New way to beat the 1040 blues

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Apparently confusing the Christmas-New Year's holiday season with Halloween, the Internal Revenue Service chose this period to mail out the new 1040 tax forms.

The form, as IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander noted in an accompanying letter, "is more complex than last year."

Verily, it takes 36 pages of fine print just to cover the instructions.

At my house, the tax instructions somehow got mixed in with the post-Christmas debris and wound up in a box containing the toy shooting gallery I was assembling.

As a result, I wasted 30 minutes trying to insert "Schedule A" into "Slot B" where "Tab C" was supposed to fit.

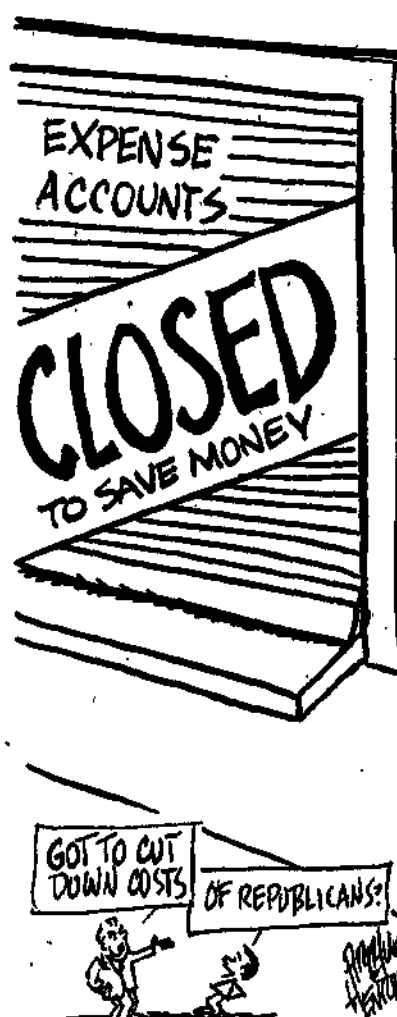

And now my son has the only shooting gallery in town whose targets are loopholes instead of bull's-eyes.

Alexander, who is nothing if not observant, noted in his letter that a "simpler tax law" is needed. Let's hear it from the Amen Corner!

As Treasury Secretary William Simon, another observant type, has pointed out, the present tax law is "a lawyer's and accountant's relief act." Well put.

From the legal profession's standpoint, the income tax is the next best thing to the whiplash.

Attorneys, perhaps with justification, have bitterly opposed moves in

I know us loyal Democrats couldn't be left to suffer!

Howlett seen as debate 'culprit'

Your editorial of December 12 correctly notes that "there has to be a better way to run a political campaign" than the situation now existing

'Organized play area needed'

In regards to the hot problem in Rolling Meadows — shall we or shall we not have a private game center:

We are not all children and an 18-year-old is not an adult to the true form, experience counts too much for those in charge. But in this town we have a beautiful park and sports area. It needs more town backing, more than just our taxes. The teens need more to do than just walking around talking or sitting, smoking who knows what. They need an organized play area that is well supervised by adults.

If you really look at the truth, the older they get the more they look to you for direction and leadership. Ask, where do they seek it? What is available? Do you dish it out as though they're 4-year-olds or young adults? This is a beautiful, well planned town fathers. Let's not undo all their hard work.

In regards to the letter of Corporal Herbert's lack of get-up-and-go about a sign in the wrong place. First of all, if it was that important, dangerous and in the wrong place, why didn't you take it down? Second, as a policeman who gives tickets for breaking the law, he too has to obey them. Cor-between Gov. Daniel Walker and his Daley-picked primary election opponent.

You also properly point out that the poral Herbert has an important job to do. I'd like to see you do it and keep your cool.

Mrs. Diane Peterson
Rolling Meadows

Writer's 'pomposity'

Dear Mr. Tim Moran:

Your article concerning the most admirable community of Long Grove and its residents is reflective of a pomposity that must be challenged on at least two counts.

It is common knowledge that restrictive zoning ordinances serve other less noble purposes than to maintain open spaces. Such zoning ordinances are even now being fought in numerous courts in Illinois and elsewhere. Mayor Coffin claims that, "We have a wider cross section than most of our neighbors." I have no idea how he comes to that conclusion, as my impression is that Long Grove is made up of people exceeding middle income levels and who are also white and Christian and, of course, have "been here a long time."

Secondly, nowhere do I find any mention of perhaps the only raison d'être for Long Grove, namely the numerous shops. These "quaint" storefronts are dedicated to the sale of antique-type goods, nostalgia items and such other "memorabilia" as can be quickly sold to over-anxious tourists from the Chicago area. It is not too hard to perceive that the old-fashioned charm is a facade for modern salesmanship and business for maximum profit.

I believe that within certain parameters Long Grove should determine its destiny but the expressions of self-satisfaction reflected in your article by its citizenry is indicative of a lack of sensitivity to the real problems of the world.

Gerald Finn

central issue in this unsatisfactory situation is the refusal of Secretary of State Michael Howlett to accept Gov. Walker's invitation to a series of debates throughout the state.

Unfortunately, however, the casual reader might conclude that the lack of debates is somehow the result of a reluctance on the part of both candidates.

The fact is that Gov. Walker has informed Howlett that he will meet him at any time, at any place, under any appropriate format, to discuss the issues in this important campaign. In the face of Howlett's refusal, the governor continues to make himself available to the taxpayers on a regular basis, and Howlett is invited to appear at any time that he chooses to face the issues.

Howlett instead ducks debates with the "rhetoric" that debates with the governor would be useless because Walker "twists and bends and distorts the truth."

If that is the case, what better forum could a candidate find to demonstrate that fault in an election opponent than a public debate? Or does Howlett have so little faith in the people of Illinois that he does not believe they can distinguish fact from fiction?

Tom Alderman
Chicago

Fence post

letters to the editor

He hits water rate story

The Buffalo Grove Herald's Jan. 7 lead story substantially distorts the real message of the recently completed village water rate study by raising false hopes of substantial reductions in water rates the residents will be paying. The essence of that report — which is a conscientious effort — may be found in two of its statements: (1) "... significant reductions in revenue and user charges cannot be justified at this time;" and (2) "... whatever rate structure is implemented, it will have to generate approximately the same amount of revenue as the existing structure ..."

In plain English, the report's recommendation is this: decrease rates for apartments and increase them for single family homes — particularly for larger families with more meals to cook, toilets to flush, clothes to wash and faces to scrub.

The village board was forced to raise rates significantly in late 1974, and its timing was such that the rates became a political issue in the village elections last spring. The results in that election, combined with the findings in the water rate study, make the point quite clearly that it is far easier to sell the voters a bill of goods than to change the economic realities of the village's bonded indebtedness.

Or perhaps President Fabish will now just appoint another committee?

Backward Glance

... our readers remember

Grandma's Indians— I'll never forget them

Help us make history come to life.

Each Monday from now until July 4 The Herald will publish a true family history anecdote relating to events that took place anywhere in the United States up to the early 1900s. Readers in the Paddock Publications area are invited to submit their family stories of past generations.

A $5 award will be presented for each published anecdote. Send the details, typed if possible, to: Eleanor Rives, Paddock Publications, 601 W. Golf Rd., Mount Prospect, Ill. 60067. Include your name, address and phone number.

Today's Backward Glance is from Mrs. Frank Callaghan of Arlington Heights, a member of the Eli Skinner Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

I remember my grandmother well. She was a high-spirited woman of medium height with beautiful big brown eyes. Born Amanda Combs in 1842, she lived until 1930, dying at the age of 88.

It was in Tarkio, Mo., along the Mississippi River that Amanda, an only child, and her parents finally settled. She loved horses and proudly drove her own horse and buggy. In Tarkio she met and married Adrian Hobbittell, who had migrated there from Maryland.

But what is most vivid in my memory are the stories my grandmother used to tell my brother and myself when we were only preschoolers — stories about the Indians that nearly scared us to death.

Before they lived in Tarkio, the Combs, with little Amanda, left Northern Illinois, crossed the plains in a covered wagon, and homesteaded in the wide open country of Nebraska. They put up their own little primitive shack, and went back and forth to a spring for their water.

This was Indian country, and little Amanda was taught to be very careful not to be noisy or upset them when she fetched water or they might shoot her.

But more important, she was strictly disciplined to be absolutely quiet at night. Should she awake during the night, she must make no sound. For the dark silhouettes passing noiselessly through the room were the forms of curious Indians examining how these newcomers lived.

Nothing was ever disturbed except, perhaps, the tranquility of the sleepers.

Just ask Van Harris

Nothing funny about a comic's life

by MIKE KLEIN

There was this lady who sought to speak with the hotel manager. She said, "Sir, I can't go in the bathroom; there's flies in there." The hotel manager responded, "Madame, go during the dinner hour. That's when they're in the dining room."

That's a Van Harris joke. "I divorced my wife because she was very immature. Everyday I took a bath, she came in and sank my boats."

That, too, is a Van Harris joke. "Anybody here ever play baseball? You know what it's like to go after a low line drive and have the ball go through your glove? A guy could die if he gets hit in certain areas."

FUNNY MAN, that Van Harris. Perhaps you've seen him on the Johnny Carson or Merv Griffin interview shows. Harris made appearances on Ed Sullivan's program. And he works ocean cruises, too.

They especially know Van Harris around New York. "Unique social commentary as seen only through my eyes," is how Harris describes his approach.

Funny man? Yes. But there's nothing funny about how Van Harris reached his position as a topnotch comedian whose annual income stretches into six figures.

Harris and Dr. Samuel Janus, assistant professor of psychiatry at New York Medical College, spoke last week before interns and doctors at Forest Hospital in Des Plaines.

JANUS CONTENTS there is a relationship between the personal anxieties and depressions of many comedians and their success as funny people.

Lengthy research, including interviews with 55 top comedians, is the basis for Janus' upcoming book, "Psychology of Comedy and the Great Comedians."

They've not always been happy

people, Janus said about the men and few women who make us laugh.

And many comedians are from nearly tragic backgrounds.

Take Van Harris, for example. Harris' family spent 12 years on welfare during his early years. Van's father, Morris, drove a beer delivery truck. But he was afflicted by an undiagnosed illness which caused the elder Harris to continually lose his balance.

"It was not unusual for me to come home and see the ambulance out front," Van told the attentive audience of perhaps 40 persons. "They were always carrying my father off to stitch him up again."

THAT WAS not the worst part. Van's younger brother, Joe, was afflicted by a radical deterioration of both hip bones. Joe spent many months encased in a body cast and could not live at home.

So Pauline Harris, her husband out of work, and one son seriously ill, had to support her family. There was little time to minister over Van who, as he tells the story, had to "cook, clean and learn electricity."

"I was lonely," Harris said. "I didn't have anybody around me. It's funny, because today I don't like to get caught in big crowds."

Yet, he did not become a bitter youngster. Van Harris was kept going by, "Love from certain people, certain teachers. That was very important."

"Love for my parents," he said. "Love... boy, that was the key to everything."

THERE WAS always something. Shirley Harris, Van's wife, had three miscarriages separating the births of grown sons Danny, 26, Andy, 24, and David, 22, plus a daughter, Madeline, 17.

Madeline once sustained a serious brain concussion while Van was away and could not return to their Teaneck, N.J., home.

On another occasion, Madeline was so upset by the murder of two friends that doctors had to summon home Shirley who was on tour with Van.

And Van could not leave work when Danny, his oldest son, had a mountain plane crash which broke his back and punctured all vital organs.

Danny recovered. "The son-of-a-gun is flying again," Van said.

If Harris' problems seem unusual... almost bizarre... then he's not alone. Janus said many topnotch comedians are men using their profession to release tension.

HIS RESEARCH has indicated that today's comedians are predominantly middle-age men from lower class ancestry. There are few college graduates and most pride themselves as being voracious readers.

George Burns, for example, quit school after the sixth grade.

Most comedians were the youngest child in their families who viewed Mother as a good friend or hero. Fathers were generally inadequate providers and lent very little support to the budding comedian.

Janus said the comedians are "brilliant, angry and suspicious." They seek approval. They need applause or they're broken men.

AND THERE has been a large degree of tragedy in their backgrounds.

Tom and Dick Smothers' father, a career Air Force officer, was killed by American planes during early stages of World War II.

Humorist Art Buchwald was immediately placed in an orphanage when his mother died at his birth.

Jan Murray's mother, father and brother all died within two months.

Yet, they had to be funny men. Or they didn't make a buck, they didn't get the applause.

VAN HARRIS is typical among them. "I'm happy as long as I'm working," he said. "If my phone stops ringing, then I'm a depressed individual."

"My fear is that somebody will come along and replace me," Van said. "I fight and claw to stay unique, to be different from others, to have my own style."

"I don't care if I become great," Van said. "I just want to be in the business as long as I live."

You see, he also believes that love and respect are a bigger victory than mere professional success, than dollars and cents.

Love... that's what kept Van Harris from coming apart as the little kid from a welfare family who had a sick father, an even sicker brother and a mother who probably worked too hard.

That Great Trout Myth

BULLHEAD CITY, Ariz.—I was 7 years old when I found out there was no Santa Claus. I was 8 when I realized the Easter Bunny was a hoax. I believed in ghosts till I was 10 and hid under the bed on Halloween.

I really believed John Wayne won the West, Errol Flynn opened the Burma Road and Cagney stamped out organized crime till I was in college.

But I never found out about the Great American Trout Myth until recently.

All my life I had believed Field & Stream, the encyclopedias, the Departments of Fish and Game. The whole conspiracy. I bought it.

I believed all the wall mountings on the back bar, all the pictures in the almanacs. I never believed in Cinderella or Snow White. But thought the Disney True Life Adventures were documentaries, no scenarios.

You take a lot of things on blind faith in sports. And I saw all the lures for sale in the sporting goods stores. The rods, the reels, the fish eggs. I believed implicitly in the Coho salmon. I never caught any. But I sat out in Puget Sound in the rain by the hour till I found out that salmon was synthesized and put in tins by two little Scandinavians from Ballard, Wash.

A whole industry is built on the Great Trout Myth. Boats are sold, slips are rented, outboards are manufactured. All predicated on the Big Lie that trout exist.

Well kiddies, there ain't no Santa Claus. Fairy tales don't come true. And, no, Virginia, there is no Great American Trout. It's just another big grown-up lie.

When I first came to California more than 30 years ago, some wise guys look me out snipe hunting. This is a little joke the natives play on us flatlanders when we first arrive. They get us to sit out all night in ankle-deep water waiting for the mythical snipe to come along and jump in our burlap bags.

Then, they tried to get me on the grunion gyp. I knew, I knew! The leishyologists insist there are little fish that come out of the ocean, dance on their tails, lay eggs and get washed out to sea again. Just tell me one thing: ever see any? Of course not.

But I didn't tumble on the Trout Lie till I came to this settlement on the banks of the Colorado and Lake Mohave where my wife's cousin, a San Diego surgeon, has a boat, a trailer, and boxes full of lures, shad eggs, hooks and sinkers.

Now, I had fished for steelhead on the Mattole River without touching any. Shucks, without SEEING any. I had been sucked in by the Great Albacore Myth on party boats off the Galapagos. I even believed in bonita. I had pier-fished without catching anything but seaweed.

But, I still cling stubbornly to the belief in apple pie, fudge, the Fourth of July and trout. I went out on the waters of the mighty Colorado with hopes high and line wet. I figured if an eminent surgeon believed in them, who was I not to? After all, there might even be leprechauns.

Well, I hate to break down an American industry. I hate to see all those sporting goods stores stuck with 100 million miles of monofilament. I hate to put Evinrude out of business. But it's my journalistic duty. Embroider this:

THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS TROUT.

If you ask me, it's something guys invented to get away from their wives for weekends. As for me, after three days of sitting in a boat, in the middle of a whole fleet of boats, trout is something that comes down the chimney on Christmas Eve. It's only right and fitting they should call it "rainbow" because that's the only place you will ever find them — at the end of one alongside the pot of gold.

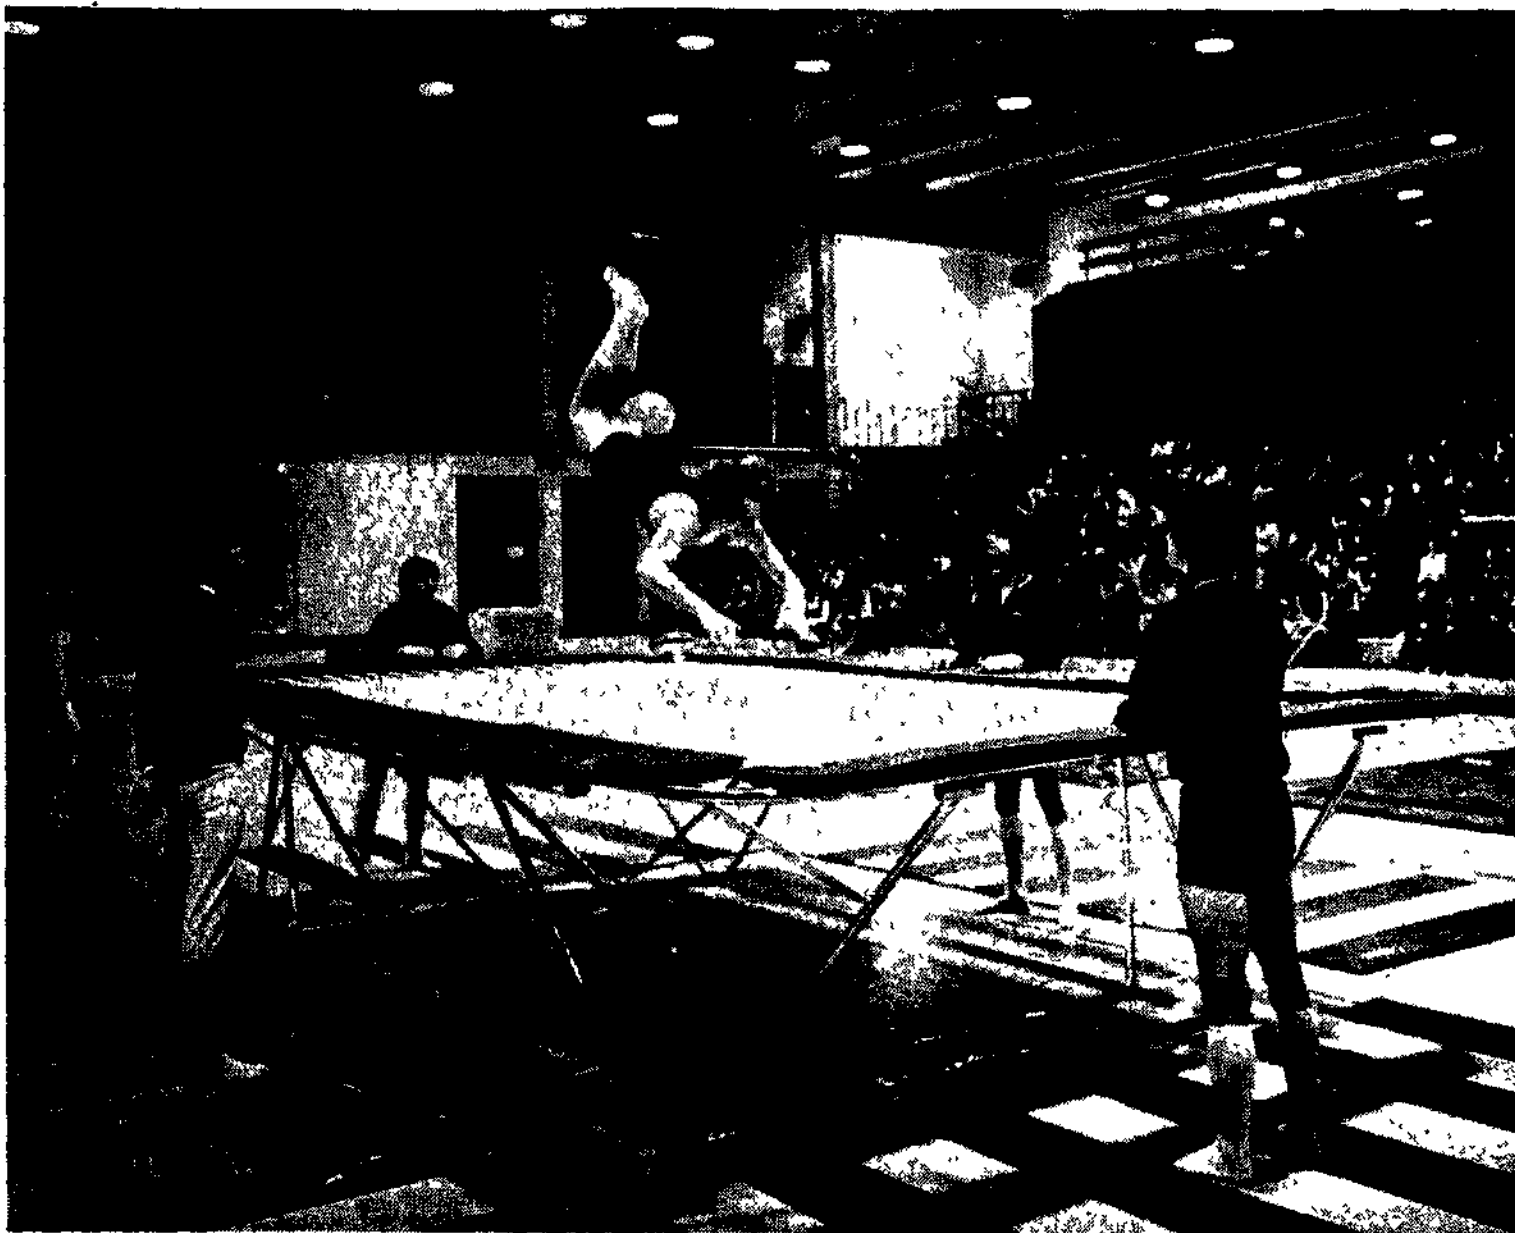

Oh, it's a powerful conspiracy, all right. Taxidermists are in on it. So are boat landings, dock operators, marinas, and guys who sell riverfront mobile-home lots. But, the first thing you get to watch out for is when all the natives say, "Well, only a week ago we limited out in a half-hour." If they say, "Well, if I'd known we were going to get skunked I would have put some in the freezer last week, but I guess we'll have to have chicken tonight," you know you're being dealt a marked deck.

Keep your cool. Play the game. Be sure to take a six-pack or a small flask with you and a whole bunch of turkey sandwiches. Pretend to believe it when the line suddenly plays out with a whirr. Act surprised when they find out it's just a rock or a rubber boot. It's really not so bad if you relax and enjoy it.

When you get out in the middle of the Mojave or up in a cove in Cottonwood, break out the beer and the playing cards and while away the afternoon while the poles sit there in their sockets.

Never let on you know it's all make-believe. Don't spoil their fun. After all, who wants to be the first to tell a kid there's no Santa Claus — or a new boat owner with a handful of lures that he's fishing for rocks, that he'd be better off hunting for unicorns.

Compared to trout, flying saucers are practically scheduled airliners.

State volleyball tourney opens with district play

by PAUL LOGAN

Fifteen Herald area girls' volleyball teams will be trying for district titles at four sites this week as the second state tournament gets under way.

Tonight's action looks like this: At Barrington — Palatine vs. Wauconda at 7:00 and Fremd vs. Dundee at 8:30.

At Glenbard North (Carol Stream) — Sacred Heart of Mary vs. Elgin at 8:30.

At Lake Park (Roselle) — Arlington vs. Elk Grove at 8:30.

Although the area had high hopes of winning several district championships in last year's inaugural tourney, only Arlington advanced, winning at Palatine. However, the Cardinals had the misfortune of running into New Trier East, which eventually won the state tournament.

New Trier only has all-tourney player Lauren Goebel back. Coach Binnie Beach's team is struggling this season with a 6-5 record compared to last year's 14-1 mark.

"From what I've seen and heard, I would guess Maine West is very strong," said Beach, who also rated Forest View, Maine South and Barrington among the top teams in the suburbs. "It's very hard to tell, however, because everybody's been having a kind of inconsistent year."

Beach tabbed these teams because of their experienced players, the consistency of their servers and their use of multiple attacks.

To make it downstate, the New Trier coach said a team must "have all of its members supremely confident in one another. It also involves having players who are very, very aggressive. And I think it involves players who are willing in any given match to build on one another's strengths and let weaknesses go by the boards. Finally, it demands consistency."

The rest of the teams will open up district play as follows:

Tuesday night — Schaumburg vs. winner of St. Edward-St. Charles (7:00) and Rolling Meadows vs. Glenbard North (8:30) at Glenbard North; Forest View vs. winner of Maine North-Lake Park (7:00) and Hersey vs. Prospect (8:30) at Lake Park.

Wednesday night — Conant vs. Elgin Larkin (7:00) and Hoffman Estates vs. winner of Elgin-Sacred Heart (8:30) at Glenbard North; Buffalo Grove vs. winner of Fremd-Dundee (8:30) at Barrington; Wheeling vs. Glenbrook North (7:00) at Libertyville; Maine West vs. winner of Arlington-Elk Grove (8:30) at Lake Park.

Thursday night — semifinals.

Friday night — Lake Park District finals at 7:30.

Saturday — Barrington and Libertyville district finals at 2 p.m. and Glenbard North District finals at 7:30 p.m.

The 64 districts throughout the state will be hosting a record 608 schools. The district winners will advance to the sectionals Jan. 20-24.

Hosting local sectionals will be Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows. Rolling Meadows will also handle a supersectional match on Jan. 27.

The state finals will take place Jan. 30-31 at Horton Fieldhouse on the campus of Illinois State University at Normal.

Bison, Saxons triumph; two teams stumble in non-conference action

A Herald Staff Report

An up-and-down Buffalo Grove team fell back on some solid performances off the bench Saturday to nip a hosting Glenbrook North group in overtime, 64-60, as the Herald area won two of four non-conference games overall.

Reservists Mike Marshall, Jeff Schuster and Scott Groot were key contributors in a game that had the Bison trailing by as many as 13 in the early going and ahead by nearly as much going into the stretch.

"We found some new ways to throw the ball away," shrugged a less than ecstatic coach Paul Grady after the guests had clicked in the extra session without the aid of junior standouts Brian Allsmiller and Mike Ledas to net their 11th triumph in 13 tries overall.

Allsmiller, who finished with a game high 30 points, fouled out early in the overtime, following the same route to the sidelines Ledas had taken late in the fourth quarter. Moments later Groot connected on a pair of free pitches to boost Buffalo Grove into a five-point advantage and salt the game away.

The Spartans raced to an early 17-4 lead, but the Bison rallied before the first period even ended and went on to forge a narrow 33-32 edge by halftime and a 12-point bulge going into the last quarter.

Marshall backed up Allsmiller with a 12-point effort and coupled it with a solid defensive showing. Schuster added 10 more points to the cause.

SAXONS SLUG LAKE PARK

Schaumburg guard Bill Solik scored 14 points and dealt out four assists as the Saxons showed some muscle with a 60-53 victory at Lake Park.

The referees whistled 50 fouls during the bruising nonconference battle, which featured five Saxons and three Lancers in double scoring figures. For Schaumburg, the win was No. 12 against just two losses.

Bill Solik

It was Solik, the Saxons' point-man in their one-guard offense, who provided the spark in the narrow victory. The 5-foot-9 junior hit seven times from the field to lead all Saxon scorers.

"Billy played his best game of the year all around," said Schaumburg coach Joe Breaux. "He was penetrating — something we've wanted him to do all season. And he had four assists, which doesn't seem like much. But in this game four assists was a lot."

The Saxons trailed early but fought back to take a 27-24 halftime lead, then broke it open with a big third quarter. Schaumburg reserve center Marty Golub replaced the foul-plagued John Chmiel and turned in an excellent defensive job on Lancer star Tom Stellmach in that period.

Solik was joined in the scoring parade by John Chmiel (12), Jon McIlraith (11), Dan Breen (11), and Ed Chmiel (10). McIlraith and Breen had 10 rebounds each.

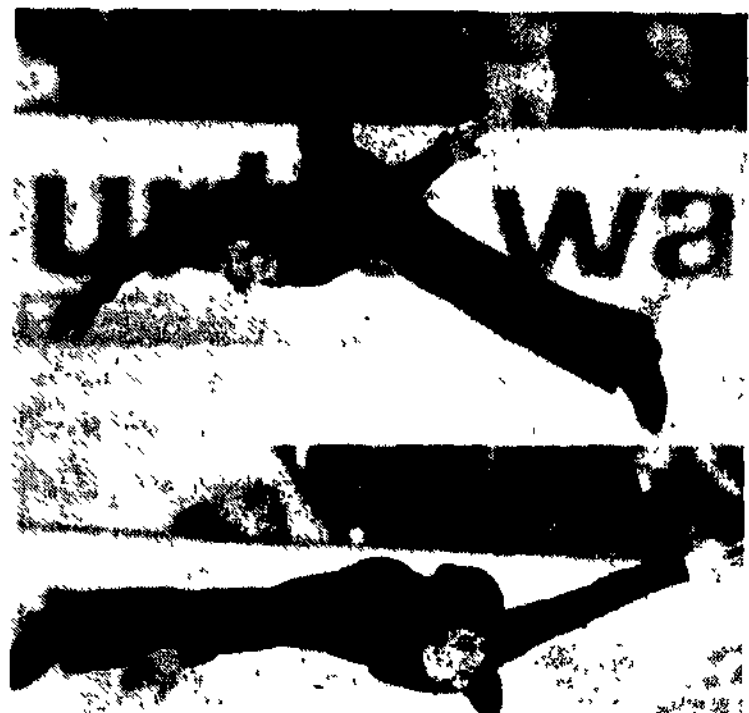

Lake Park, which may see Schaumburg again in the Hoffman Estates regional in March, was led by Kent Eck's 15 and Stellmach's 13.

BEFORE THE STORM. Philadelphia's Ed Van Impe (2) body checks Soviet Army's Valeri Kharlamov to the ice Sunday. The Soviet team did not like the call on the play and skated off the ice but returned later to take a 4-1 loss.

Rangers explode early, top Hawks

The New York Rangers exploded early, held on against a Chicago surge in the second period, and skated to an impressive 6-2 National Hockey League victory over the Black Hawks Sunday night in the stadium. However, the Hawks maintained their eight-point advantage in the Smythe Division as Vancouver dropped a 5-3 decision to Atlanta.

In the opening period the Rangers stormed to a quick 3-0 lead, putting constant pressure on Hawk goalie Tony Esposito. Walt Tkaczuk worked one in from in front of the goal at 3:14, and then Red Gilbert counted from short right wing. Greg Polis slipped in a goal from left wing at 10:33.

The Black Hawks utilized an effective passing game for their first score at 18:01 of the first period. Dale Tallon got the goal on a power play.

Chicago pulled within one at 2:09 in the second period on a counter by John Marks, his 13th, but Tkaczuk and Gilbert each responded with their second goals to make it 5-2.

Aggressive Chris Evert wins for $50,000 check

Chris Evert has learned her lesson about Evonne Goolagong. And she showed Sunday in Austin, Tex., she has learned it well.

When the tennis darling from Florida meets her chief competitor from Australia, Evert knows she has to go all out. Sitting back waiting for something to happen is not going to get the job done.

So Evert went out and made it happen Sunday, successfully defending her Women's World Series of Tennis title with a 6-3, 7-6 victory that brought her $50,000 — the richest prize in women's sport.

"I'm taking more chances with her now and playing more aggressively and the results have been better," said Evert, who has had a long series of exciting matches with Goolagong.

"I have played her cautiously before and have lost. I like to go to the net more because it is exciting and it is challenging to me."

Only $40,000 for Miller

Johnny Miller, with a clinching, 25-foot birdie putt on the 16th hole, pulled away Sunday to win the $200,000 Tucson Open for the third straight year and pocket the $40,000 first prize.

The 28-year-old blond Californian won the 1974 Tucson with a 16 under par score and last year took the event with an incredible 25-under-par 263.

This year, he took the lead for the first time with a birdie putt on the 57th hole, then held off challenges by British Open Champion Tom Watson, former PGA King Dave Stockton, young Howard Twitty and Tom Weiskopf to win with a 72-hole score of 14-under-par 274.

Miller, playing in a threesome ahead of Weiskopf birdied the 16th for a two shot lead and then Weiskopf took a double bogey on the same hole to put Miller safely in front with a hole to play.

Miller, who wound up with a final round 68, boosted his career earnings to $667,152. That leaves him only $12,841 short of becoming golf's ninth millionaire.

Flyers dump Soviets, 4-1

The Philadelphia Flyers' 4-1 victory over the Soviet Red Army team Sunday didn't do anything to help détente.

The Soviets, soundly outshot 49-13, left town calling the aggressive Flyers "animals" and the Flyers responded that Russia's top hockey team was guilty of "poor sportsmanship."

"We would never be playing such animals," said Soviet Coach Konstantin Loktev, referring to the Russian style of hockey. "They did a lot of fighting on the ice but they also did a lot of thinking on the ice," Loktev added.

There were no fistfights during the game but tempers flared occasionally following heavy checks on the boards.

Loktev lost his temper at 11:21 of the first period. He pulled his team from the ice for 16 minutes because he thought a tripping penalty should have been called on Philadelphia defenseman Ed Van Impe after Valeri Kharlamov fell to the ice. The game finally continued.

Loktev took his players to the dressing room and it was only after both American and Soviet officials urged him to continue the contest that he agreed to return his team to the ice.

Rejection for playoff?

John Fuzak, president of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn., said Sunday strong opposition on academic grounds is likely to lead to rejection of a proposal for an NCAA national football championship playoff. . . . Delegates to the NCAA's convention this week will consider the playoff proposal. . . . The Washington Capitals tied a National Hockey League record Sunday by playing their 21st straight game without a victory. . . . Washington lost to Boston 7-4 and is now 3-35-6 for the season. . . . They equalled the record shared by the 1943-44 New York Rangers and 1959-61 Chicago Black Hawks. . . . Top-seeded Arthur Ashe fought off a stiff challenge by Andrew Pattison to win the World Championship Tennis Classic in Columbus, Ohio, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6. . . . Quarterback Craig Fennie of San Diego State passed for three touchdowns and more than 300 yards Sunday to lead the North to a 43-36 victory over the South in the Senior Bowl All-Star game. . . . Jack Pardee of the Chicago Bears was the South's head coach.

Reg Fleming heads hockey league

Reggie Fleming, former NHL and WHA professional hockey player for 19 years, is heading a special 13-week Men's Hockey League beginning the week of Jan. 18 at Randhurst Twin Ice Arena, Mount Prospect.

Open to players 17 and older, the league will involve 1½-hour games played from 10:45 p.m. to 12:15 a.m. on Thursday evenings and from 10:30 to midnight on Sunday evenings. Individual registration is $30. Entire teams having a minimum of 16 players can also register.

A valuable member of the Chicago Black Hawks '60-'61 Stanley Cup Championship team, Fleming also saw service as a defenseman and wing with the NHL New York Rangers, Boston Bruins, Philadelphia Flyers and Buffalo Sabres and with the Chicago Cougars of the WHA. Noted for his colorful playing style, he was generally regarded as an all-out player who exemplified the role determination played in succeeding in a demanding sport.

Supplementing his pro background, Fleming has remained active for the past two years with semi-pro hockey teams and by working with youngsters and amateur players. He currently coaches the Lake County Flyers of the semi-pro Central Hockey League and assists in coaching the Hersey team in the Metro High School Hockey League. He has also been involved in numerous hockey clinics and hockey programs at rinks in the metropolitan Chicago area.

"In addition to offering top competition in a well-organized program, I hope to give each player as much guidance as possible, drawing on my experience as a pro," said Fleming. He indicated that this element was generally overlooked in such House League programs.

The Randhurst Men's House League will also involve a complete statistics program plus playoff competition, with the championship team feted at a banquet celebration. A special championship cup inscribed with the name of each team member will be on permanent display at the Arena.

Fleming lives in Hoffman Estates with his wife Patricia and two children, Chris, age 8 and Kelly, age 6.

Registration forms and further information concerning the Men's House League program can be obtained daily from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. at Randhurst Twin Ice Arena, located at the southeast end of the Randhurst Shopping Center parking lot in Mount Prospect.

Marriott holds free tennis clinics

A series of free, two-hour tennis clinics, designed to demonstrate a dynamic new tennis concept, will be conducted by the touring Marriott National Tennis Clinic beginning Monday, Jan. 19, at Marriott's Lincolnshire Resort Racquet Club. Additional free clinics are scheduled for Wednesday, Jan. 21; Monday and Wednesday, Jan. 26 and 28, and the first two Mondays in February.

Each clinic will be divided into two sessions — 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Enrollment is limited to 30 people per session. As an additional benefit, there will be free day care for children.

The new tennis concept, according to Pat McKenna, clinic director, is designed to develop the complete player. It is a combination of the best of yoga tennis technique and the more traditional method of instruction.

"This concept accentuates self-awareness and relaxation," McKenna said. "With heightened awareness, players will be able to move easily rectify playing errors. And, by learning relaxation techniques, they will be able to utilize their motor skills at the highest possible level. In conjunction with basic tennis technique, this awareness will aid in the development of a more complete and self-sustaining player."

The clinic will offer on-court instruction for beginning, intermediate and advanced players taught by four of the country's leading teaching professionals. In addition to McKenna, the staff includes associate director Rick Champion, Robyn Ray and Arlo Elkins.

McKenna, the national director of tennis for the hotel chain, is a seasoned pro with over 14 years teaching experience. Much of it was gained in the Chicago area at the Lake Forest Club, the Glenview Club and finally as general manager and head pro of the Mid-Town Tennis Club of Chicago.

Rick Champion, author of Yoga Tennis, has more than 10 years teaching experience at John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch and other leading tennis clubs.

Robyn Ray's teaching background includes a stint as head pro at John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch. He also served as coach of the 1973 Belgium National Junior Davis Cup team. Arlo Elkins, a former Michigan State champion, has six years' teaching experience.

The clinic utilizes the more sophisticated tennis teaching aids available, including instant replay video tapes and films, automatic ball machines and stationary stroke developers.

For further information or to reserve your place in an introductory session of the Marriott National Tennis Clinic, call the Racquet Club at Marriott's Lincolnshire Resort, 634-0100, ext. 6236.

Marriott's Lincolnshire Resort is located just 20 minutes north of O'Hare International Airport on Milwaukee Avenue one-quarter mile south of Hall Day Road (Route 22). It is easily accessible from the north, south, east and west Interstate highways via the Tri-State Tollway (I-94).

Santee skates to berth on World, Olympic teams

Special to The Herald

COLORADO SPRINGS — It was the finest moment in Chicago figure skating history.

Seventeen-year-old David Santee from Park Ridge and the Chicago Figure Skating Club qualified for the United States World and Olympic teams here late Saturday night at the Broadmoor World Arena.

Competing in the United States figure skating championships, Santee skated to a second place finish in Senior Men's and an automatic spot on the prestigious World and Olympic teams. Only the top two skaters qualify.

Santee was first in figures but fell on the short program trying a difficult jump. He rebounded Saturday in the free style program with an exceptional routine highlighted by three perfect triple jumps.

Terry Kubicka of California, a visitor to the Randhurst arena last year in a special exhibition, was the individual winner in Senior Men's in Colorado.

James Santee of Park Ridge, David's brother, was fourth in Novice Men, and Frank Swedding of Prospect Heights took 11th overall in Senior Men.

The Sweddings of Prospect Heights, Frank and Beth, had to withdraw from the Senior Pairs because of an injury suffered by Beth earlier in the week.

DAVID SANTEE of Park Ridge gave the Chicago suburban area its finest moment in figure skating history Saturday night when he qualified for the United States World and Olympic teams. Santee, represented the Chicago Figure Skating Club at the competition in Colorado Springs.

Hersey falls to Hinsdale gymnasts

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Gymnastics Editor

Questionable judging was the story of the night when the Hersey Huskies and Hinsdale Central, traditionally among the most illustrious dual meets of the season, met in the Red Devils' gym Saturday.

Hinsdale, sparked by an ever stronger Breck Grigas, won the matchup 148.31 to 137.77 and Hersey coach Don Von Ebers isn't quibbling about that. What annoyed the veteran Huskie mentor was the fact that both judges were inexperienced.

"There's no doubt that they beat us," he said. "They missed only one of 24 routines while we didn't have a single apparatus where we didn't mess up. It was the first really bad meet we've had this year."

"But both myself and Neil (Krupicka, the Hinsdale head coach) felt the judging was hurting the kids. They were both greenhorns and they had 13 conferences between routines."

"When the kids have to stand around and wait for them they tighten up. They're all set to go and then they have to wait while the judges gab."

Grigas, who has just returned from an injury, scorched the all-around field with an 8.21 average and won the high bar routine with an 8.6.

Hersey's Danny Muenz finished the all-around with a 7.57 average but captured the P-Bars title with a 8.85 clocking.

Bob Barut and Ray Peters teamed up for a superlative trampoline effort with scores of 8.45 and 8.2 respectively.

Rolling Meadows pulled third place out of the Conant Invite Saturday as the Oak Park Huskies walked off with the championship.

Meadows' Dave Eycroft threw an 8.3 on still rings to win that event. Keith Liszewski's 8.5 routine on the high bar earned him a second place award.

Conant came in sixth with 24.5 points as Jeff Worst took a fourth on P-Bars with a 7.5 score.

Hoffman Estates placed ninth. The only Mid-Suburban League dual meet saw Elk Grove smothering Schaumburg 142.77 to 75.48.

Elk Grove's Gene Christensen and Matt Damore fought it out for the all-around title with Christensen slipping away with a 7.82 average to edge Damore's 7.87.

Tim Connelly dominated the side horse with an 8.45 routine, despite a serious fall. Tom Balla won the high bar with an 8.5 routine.

Mark Sterle's 6.7 on free ex was the high point of the Saxons' effort.

Dewey Deal's return has pumped new life into the Buffalo Grove Bison and Denny Mazur's team hit 130 for the first time this year with a 131.50 to 100.76 triumph over Maine East.

Only a sophomore, Deal surprised even his coach with a 7.4 all-around average while winning individual honors on side horse (6.6), high bar (8.05), P-Bars (7.3) and still rings (8.05).

"Dewey missed most of last season and the first part of this year," Mazur said, "and he makes a 10 point difference in our score."

"If he hadn't missed last year he could be another Bart Conner."

Buffalo Grove swept all the events with Fred Bista winning free ex (7.5) and Mike Rine the trampoline (7.4).

Forest View went north to Racine, Wis. for the Peppermint Invitational and took fourth place in the 20 team field.

Jeff Patterson led the Falcon effort with a fourth place finish on high bar at 5.25. Dario Cruz fired a 5.3 on still rings to take fifth place.

Wrestling classes slated at Arlington

The Arlington Park District will conduct a learn to wrestle class for all boys in grades 4-8 beginning Jan. 31.

The six-week program will be held on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon at Arlington High School in Room 119. The program will be handled by Arlington head coach Jack Cutlip and assistant Howie Tuttle.

Equipment required are shorts, towels and tennis shoes. The registration fee is $7 with sign-up at Olympic Park at 660 N. Ridge. Office hours are Monday through Friday from 1-5 p.m.

Geiersbach hits 813 series with 299 game

Ted Geiersbach found the track at Hoffman Estates last week and before the Hoffman Estates resident put the ball back into his bag, he steamrolled new single game and series marks into the record book.

Geiersbach, a former member of the Paddock Classic Traveling League and an active member in the American Junior Bowling Congress, rifled near-flawless games of 225, 289 and 289 for an astonishing 813 series.

Bowling for Village Automotive in the Tuesday Night 3-Man Scratch League, Geiersbach added a 234 fourth game to complete the evening with a remarkable 1047 total.

Geiersbach's 299 second game, the top score ever rolled at Hoffman, featured 12 perfect pocket hits with only an uncooperative, solid seven pin on his final ball depriving him of a 308 game.

Ted Geiersbach

After falling one pin short of bowling immortality, Geiersbach relentlessly continued to assault the 1-3 pocket with 10 more strikes in the third game for a blistering 289. The two-game total represented 21 of a possible 24 strikes.

Bison, Saxons triumph

cashed only one field goal in the second period during a 67-66 loss to highly-regarded Rockford-Gulfport.

Despite shooting just 39 per cent from the floor, the Cardinals of coach Don Drain still remained within striking range until late in the fourth period.

The Cardinals, after absorbing a 22-10 Rockford scoring binge in the second period, rode junior Dave Kamps' 13 second half points back into contention.

But Arlington missed eight bonus free throw attempts down the stretch and never came closer than 16. Jim Grandt contributed 11 points and both Frank DeSimone and Tom North added eight.

Arlington held its own on the boards with 10-4 Guilford as Grandt, Greg Kleiber and Kamps each pulled down six and Greg Jantach snared five. The Cardinals' over-all record dipped to 3-10.

MUSTANGS GO COLD

Rolling Meadows turned the ball over seven times in the second quarter, managed only six shots from the field and was outscored 18-4 as touted Elgin triumphed, 73-55.

The cold spell overshadowed an otherwise impressive Mustang performance. Meadows strapped Elgin with a three-quarter court press and vaulted to a 14-11 advantage after one period before the frost bite set in.

The Mustangs recovered in the third quarter for a 20-19 scoring advantage and were still within 10 points with three minutes remaining before Elgin began solving the press for lay-ups.

Bill Wissen and John Carbery shared Meadows' scoring honors with 16 apiece and Gerry McGill turned in his finest performance of the season in a superb defensive role while dropping in six.

The Mustangs were outscored only 31-29 as Wissen ripped down 10. Meadows' over-all record stands at 4-8.

College triangular at Elk Grove

Scott and Steve Phillips will return to the scene of their high school gymnastics triumphs at Elk Grove when the Greys' home hosts a collegiate triangular gym meet at 7:30 p.m.

The former Elk Grove stars may be rooting for each other but their sympathies will be different with different teams as Scott struts his stuff for Oregon and Steve for Northern Illinois.

The third team involved in the meet will be Indiana State.

Elk Grove gym coach Fred Gaines said, "Indiana State is one of the best teams in the country and Oregon has several All-Americans."

Mike Hieberger, another former Greyn, will work for Northern and many of the competitors in the meet prepped in Illinois.

Tickets are $1.00 for adults and $.75 for students.

A bunch of hams

Dancing Darlings

by ELEANOR RIVES

It happened one night when Alice Gable was doing her soft shoe number. "Maybe we're not good, but we sure have guts!" she ad-libbed. Her remark evoked so much laughter, it's been part of the number ever since.

So who is Alice Gable?

She is a Dancing Darling. One of 25 amateur performers, all women all full of fun, happy to entertain people and to laugh at themselves. When the Dancing Darlings give a performance, it's difficult to tell who enjoys it most — the audience or the performers.

THE GROUP originated at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Des Plaines some eight years ago when Father Earl Thomas watched the Women's Club's amateur show for the first time. He encouraged Betty Cichon, who became director, and Frieda Folz, now the booking agent, to organize a more permanent entertaining unit. That meant writing scripts, taping music, designing and making costumes, constructing all the props and working out lighting and special effects.

It began with 12 women, all from St. Mary's Church, and a dancing teacher, Mrs. Dixie Kloss, from Fr. Thomas' former parish. Now the 25 members, ranging in age from their twenties to their sixties, come from all parts of Des Plaines.

THEY HAVE given more than 100 performances, entertaining at churches, nursing homes, hospitals, fraternal clubs, lodges, women's groups and schools.

They even broke into TV some two years ago when a crew from the Jacobson-Kurtz "Two on Two" program filmed bits of their rehearsal, a live show and a few interviews with the women, fashioning it all into a TV featurette.

The Dancing Darlings have four separate variety shows in their repertoire: The Roaring '20s, the French Revue, Land of Aloha and Jet Stop, an international revue.

A story line runs through each show, with much lip synchronization and taped music, but the enthusiastic dancing and motions are strictly their own.

WHAT REQUIREMENTS are there for joining the group? "You need to be able to move," joked Frieda. To this Betty added, "with enthusiasm." But both agreed that a little dancing experience — and a lot of verve — are helpful.

Frieda described the Roaring '20s show. "It's set in a speakeasy," she said. "And the characters look tough. They are entertained by Rudy Vallee and his Pompon girls. And by Sophie Tucker — ours looks more like Sophie than she does herself."

The French Revue opens with a dance number by French maids and gendarmes in a Paris park. The action moves inside Maxim's Restaurant where the hat check girl goes into a top hat number. There are a mime act by Marcel Marceau; a song by Maurice Chevalier, complete with the "little girls" he is singing about; and a number by a couple of tough apache dancers.

AT PRESENT, the show most often requested is the Roaring '20s. After it was presented at a nursing home, one elderly man exclaimed, "That brought back some of the best memories in years — I knew every speakeasy in town."

Another oldster who had watched the French Revue presented himself to Betty Cichon, clicked his heels together, gallantly kissed her hand and said huskily, "Vive la France."

Betty Cichon's co-director is Ginny Sestone. Until they outgrew the thrill of it, the Cichon kids were the stage crew. Other interested young people have helped out, too. Now the group could readily use some part-time members who would be content to handle lights and equipment.

"Oh we could use a carpenter once in awhile, a fix-it man," said Betty. "Sometimes we hogtie a husband or son."

THE DANCING Darlings were struck a mighty blow recently when all their sound equipment was stolen from their truck — speakers, amplifier, control panel, Strobe lights, spotlight and more. It was a nasty financial setback and the girls, improvising and borrowing equipment, are working harder than ever to replace it.

There is a standard performance fee for organizations that have a program budget, but hospital and nursing home performances are free. Four shows are already scheduled for January and the Darlings are booked as far ahead as September. But there is always room for more. Arrangements may be discussed with Mrs. Folz at 824-5434.

"We're not professional by a long shot," she said, "— but we're getting there. The truth is, we're a bunch of hams."

Cholesterol: guilty party in heart attack?

by AL ROSSITER JR.

(First in a series)

Dr. Robert I. Levy, director of the National Heart and Lung Institute, hasn't eaten an egg in several years. Heart surgeon Michael DeBakey eats them regularly.

Eggs have become the focal point of a growing controversy over the role cholesterol plays in heart disease, which kills more than twice as many Americans as cancer.

Cholesterol is a tasteless, odorless, white fatty substance which enters the body in the foods we eat. It is especially abundant in egg yolks, some meats, milk, butter and cheese, but is absent in vegetable fats and oils.

The body needs cholesterol for some basic chemical tasks and, in fact, makes most of the cholesterol it uses. The trouble is, cholesterol also has been implicated in hardening of the arteries or atherosclerosis, the silent forerunner of heart attacks and strokes.

Arteries become thickened and roughened by deposits of cholesterol and other fats, cellular debris and calcium. As the buildup continues, the blood channel narrows, making it easier for a clot to form and shut off the flow altogether. If that happens, the result is a heart attack or, if the plugged vessel is in the brain, a stroke.

WHETHER CHOLESTEROL from foods is the guilty party has not been proved. Some other factor — or combination of factors — might be the real culprit. After years of research, no one knows for sure.

If coronary heart disease could be wiped out, the average life span of

The cholesterol controversy

American men could be increased by eight to 10 years, by some estimates. Elimination of cancer would extend the average life by about 2.5 years.

Despite vast improvements in medicine in this century, the average life expectancy for men who reach age 40 is only six months longer today than it was in 1900.

"Whatever social affluence and medicine have achieved, something else has been taken away," says Henry Blackburn of the University of Minnesota. "That something else is principally the atherosclerotic, coronary and cardiovascular disease epidemic."

Hardening of the arteries is a peculiarly Western disease. It is not a major health problem in Japan, some other Asian nations or Africa.

Because the incidence of coronary heart disease varies with cultures, it must not be part of the natural process of human aging. So, the reasoning goes, something else must be causing it, and there must be ways to prevent it.

THEREIN LIES the controversy over cholesterol.

Research going back to 1847 has shown cholesterol to be a constituent of artery-blocking material. It has long been known, too, that children with extraordinarily high blood levels of cholesterol because of inherited defects had heart attacks at early ages.

In the past 40 years, various studies have tied cholesterol to coronary disease in one way or another. Perhaps the best evidence of a connection has come from studies in which originally healthy people have been followed for a number of years.

One of the most famous was conducted in Framingham, Mass., where the medical history of 5,127 residents was watched for years. Dr. Thomas Dawber, architect of the study, said in an interview at Boston University Medical Center that blood cholesterol was proved to be a heart disease risk.

"The higher the level of cholesterol in the blood, the greater the probability that individuals would develop coronary heart disease at an earlier age than people who didn't have this abnormality," he said.

The Framingham study, however, did not find a relationship between what people ate and their cholesterol levels. Dawber said the diets of the people studied did not vary markedly in terms of cholesterol consumption.

But it is known that cholesterol levels in the blood can be lowered to some extent by drugs or by a carefully selected, low-cholesterol diet.

The big question is this: if you reduce the cholesterol in your blood, do you reduce your risk of developing coronary heart disease?

"The answer is, we don't know," said Dr. Basil Rifkind, chief of the National Heart and Lung Institute's fat metabolism branch.

"There have been many studies in the U.S. and abroad, and many point in an encouraging direction," he told an interviewer in his office on the sprawling Bethesda, Md., campus of the National Institutes of Health.

"BUT NONE OF them has been substantially well conducted or sufficiently free of doubts to reach a definitive conclusion that yes, lowering lipids does help, or no, lowering lipids doesn't help you."

"My own personal bias is that the abundant circumstantial evidence makes it very likely that lowering cholesterol will be sure to be of benefit. But there's a great jump to be taken between saying that I believe on the basis of my scientific judgment and on the evidence to date that this likely will be shown and for it definitely to be shown to be true."

The evidence is good enough for the American Heart Association to publish low-cholesterol cookbooks and other dietary information aimed at reducing the public's cholesterol consumption. One is labeled, "A fat-controlled, low cholesterol meal plan to reduce the risk of heart attack."

THE EVIDENCE also was sufficient in 1972 to prompt a commission representing 29 medical organizations to recommend that the public lower the cholesterol in its diet.

The government doesn't go that far.

"Until we prove, at least in high-risk patients, that lowering cholesterol is beneficial or doesn't have side effects associated with it, it's hard to make those aggressive recommendations to the entire community," says the Heart and Lung Institute's Dr. Levy.

"I personally haven't eaten an egg for several years, but because of the science and economy involved, it is not appropriate for us to recommend lowering everyone's cholesterol," he said in an interview.

"We recommend strongly cholesterol-lowering diets to patients that are clearly at risk. It's worth betting on. To those whose cholesterol is not elevated, we'd rather wait."

When doctors talk about risk factors in heart disease, cholesterol by no means stands alone. High blood pressure and smoking also are known to play important roles, and the stresses of modern life are attracting increased attention as another possible cause.

As a result, some specialists discount the importance of low-cholesterol diets in reducing the danger of heart disease for most people.

DeBakey, the noted Houston heart surgeon, says rigid diets are likely to help only a small number of Americans whose basic metabolic abnormalities make them more susceptible to artery disease than others. For patients with abnormal cholesterol blood levels, he recommends a low-cholesterol diet.

"IN NORMAL individuals with normal lipoprotein metabolism, there is no evidence that eating eggs can cause those people to have heart attacks," DeBakey said.

He considers himself in the low-risk category and eats eggs regularly.

Dr. Christian Barnard, the South African heart transplant pioneer, said in a recent interview it is difficult to advise people when the cause of atherosclerosis is unknown. Personally, he believes inherited factors play the greatest role in heart disease.

What would he tell people who are concerned about heart disease?

"I would suggest that they lead a life they can enjoy," Barnard replied.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Cataract surgery can help elderly

My mother, age 66, has a cataract in one eye. She is beginning to stumble and fall, cannot read much and cannot continue her hobby of sewing. This is making her life miserable and she is very nervous.

The doctor said it's too early for surgery and to check back in a year. When she asked about surgery earlier, he said it could be done, but he wasn't at all encouraging.

What are the disadvantages of having this surgery done earlier? Is it a more difficult operation for the doctor? Are the chances of success less? Why does he say to wait so long when I've read that in these modern times it's not necessary for a cataract to be "ripe" before surgery?

A cataract is simply the clouding of the small, normally clear lens in the eye. We see by light images being transmitted through the lens. When it clouds from internal changes, we can't see because it is opaque.

One of the prime indications for removal of a cataract is when the vision is affected to the point that it induces disability in the patient. I think this is very important in older people. Some of their most important pleasures are dependent upon seeing. In fact, I think many older people become prematurely senile because they can't see to read and stay in touch with the world, and they can't hear very well either. With such sensory deprivation it is little wonder that they withdraw, get nervous or even lose touch with reality.

You do not have to wait until the cataract is "ripe" to remove. A "ripe" cataract is one that is completely opaque. The hard round lens must then be removed before it causes complications. Such a lens can lead to glaucoma, the buildup of pressure in the eye that can cause blindness.

Sometimes a doctor doesn't want to remove a cataract because his examination shows that the vision is still quite adequate. There are many people with some clouding of the lens of one or even both eyes who still see rather well and are happy with their sight.

IN OTHER CASES, the patient may have other visual problems totally unrelated to the formation of cataracts. These additional defects may be more important, and the patient may not greatly benefit from surgery. So it is not all black or white.

In cases where the cataract is the only important visual problem, cataract surgery is remarkably effective. It will restore vision in over 95 per cent of cases. The operation is simple and there are now even choices in types of operations.

I would suggest asking your doctor again about your mother's status in view of what you state are her visual problems. If she does have this much trouble because of the cataract formation alone, then perhaps he will consider earlier surgery. If you are not satisfied with his opinion, you are always entitled to obtain a second opinion from a qualified ophthalmologist.

Recovering card table a job for an amateur?

Dear Dorothy: Your piece about burns on laminated plastic intrigues me because I got interested in a bridge table at a garage sale. It had been covered with a piece of striking laminated plastic. My own bridge table has seen better days and I'm wondering if this can be put on by an amateur. — Harold Franke Checked a distributor of laminated plastic. He says that you need a piece of the material one-fourth inch larger all around than the size of the table. First step is to rough up the old top by sanding with very rough sandpaper. Then apply bond cement to the table top and a coat to the underside of the plastic sheet. He says a rolling pin would help smooth out the ridges. Then, he adds, you file off the excess with a metal file — flush to the edges.

Dear Dorothy: Here's a tip for those who occasionally forget to defrost some meat for dinner and come home too late to do much about it. I give the family one of their favorites. I put some frozen chopped meat in a frying pan, break it up as it cooks, then add minced onions and peppers, cooking it all together. When done, I add equal amounts of ketchup and barbecue sauce, salt and pepper to taste — and serve on buns. Even my husband adores it. — Jennie Gerson

Dear Dorothy: One of the grandchildren left us a memento of her visit — a crayon-scratched area on the painted bathroom wall. Any way to get this off? — Mrs. J. D. Weaver

It shouldn't be difficult — unless the crayon was red. It's a hard dye to get off anything. You can try one of several things: Any wall cleaner that contains ammonia, the one that has a grease-cutting solvent in it, or trichloroethane, the nonflammable cleaning solvent.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Oakton lists classes for women

Different ways of finding jobs for women will be discussed at three Monday workshops sponsored by the Women's Outreach Resource Center at Oakton Community College.

The first session, "Tracking Down That Job," will be held Jan. 19 at the First Congregational Church, 766 Graceland Ave., Des Plaines, starting at 9:30 a.m.

"Writing a Resume and Cover Letter" will be discussed Jan. 26 at St. Tim's Lutheran Church, 3000 Kildare, Skokie. "Your Job Interview" will be the topic of the Feb. 2 meeting at First Congregational Church. The sessions are free.

Facts about birth control, childbearing and menopause will be discussed in "Women: Our Bodies, Ourselves," an eight-week course sponsored by the adult education and especially for Women programs at Oakton.

The course begins Jan. 29 and will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. on the college campus, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove. Tuition is $24.

Persons seeking further information or wishing to register may contact the adult education center at 967-5821 or Patricia Handzel, Oakton director of women's programs at 967-5120, extension 350.

Greenerfields sets seminar on retirement

A seminar for men and women making plans for retirement is being offered by Greenerfields, Unlimited, Northfield, beginning Feb. 4. Reservations for the eight two-hour sessions are now being taken at 446-0525. Fee, including manuals, is $75 per person, $125 per couple.

The course has been planned and researched by American Association of Retired Persons and includes audio visual presentations, discussion leaders and a qualified resource person for each topic. Included will be sessions on the challenge of retirement, health and safety, housing and location, legal affairs, attitude and role adjustment, meaningful use of time, sources and amounts of income and financial planning.

Elizabeth Neas-Michael Carver

The wedding rings exchanged Nov. 29 by Elizabeth Anne Neas and Michael William Carver were made by the bride. Cast in sterling silver, the rings featured a leaf design.

A junior in the fine arts department at East Tennessee State University, Betsy is a '73 graduate of Arlington High and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar F. Neas, Arlington Heights.

Michael, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Carver, Gatlinburg, Tenn., served two years in the Navy and studied at the University of Georgia. He is employed by Tennessee Electric Co., Bristol, Tenn., and the couple are making their home in nearby Boone's Creek.

THE 3 P.M. wedding and the reception were held in Wesley Student Foundation on the campus of East Tennessee State in Johnson City. Gail Christofferson of Mauldin, S.C., a former Arlington Heights resident, was Betsy's only attendant. The groom was attended by his father.

Linda Winkowski — Richard Carlson

After a honeymoon in Florida, Linda Winkowski and her bridegroom, Richard Carlson, are making their home in an Arlington Heights apartment. Married Dec. 20, Linda is the daughter of the Ed Winkowskis, Mount Prospect, and Rick is the son of the Robert Carlsons, also of Mount Prospect.

Their double ring wedding took place at 3 p.m. in St. Emily's Catholic Church, Mount Prospect, with a reception for 175 guests following at the Camelot Restaurant in Des Plaines.

Matron of honor was the bride's aunt, Jacqueline Bialkowski of Niles, and bridesmaids were Linda's sister, Susan, the groom's sister Caryn Stewart, and Barbara Pasdora, all of Mount Prospect. Linda's 5-year-old cousin, Ronald Bialkowski Jr., was ring bearer.

GREGG PASDIORA, Mount Prospect, was best man, and ushers were David Fisher, Appleton, Wis., Michael Stewart, Mount Prospect, brother-in-law of the groom, and the bride's uncle, Ronald Bialkowski.

Linda and Rick are both graduates of Hersey High and both studied at Harper College. Linda is employed by Homemakers Finance Service, Inc., Mount Prospect, and Rick is with Paddock Publications, Arlington Heights.

Next on the agenda

ARLINGTON ASSOCIATES

The next luncheon meeting of Arlington Associates is Wednesday at Old Orchard Country Club. Cocktails will be served at 11:30 a.m. and lunch at 12:30. Cost of the luncheon plus card prizes is $4. Pinocchio and bridge will follow a short business session.

Reservations are due today by 6 with Evelyn Nolley, 263-1126, or Bea Dunn, 394-1718.

PALATINE HOMEMAKERS

Did you know that sound coat and suit shopping begins at home? The reasons behind this and helpful suggestions on the selection of coats and suits for men and women will be the topic of Tuesday's meeting of Palatine Unit, Homemakers Extension Association.

The group meets at noon in Palatine Township Hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd. Local leaders are Gretchen Breit and Margaret Hayman.

The meeting is preceded by a craft planning session at 11 a.m. Information 359-3058.

ARLINGTON JUNIORS

Ms. Mari Eagan of Kellen's Nursery, Mount Prospect, will speak on the cultivation, care and use of plants in the home at Tuesday's 7:30 p.m. meeting of Arlington Heights Junior Women's Club. A discussion period will follow to answer questions on plant diseases.

The meeting takes place in Pioneer Park Fieldhouse, 500 S. Fernandez, Arlington Heights. Information 255-4364.

LAKE-COOK BPW

Because the program is of interest to every woman who drives a car, Tuesday's meeting of Lake-Cook Business and Professional Women's Club will be open to visitors. The group will learn how to cope with car emergencies when they meet at the Community Center in Wheeling's Chamber Park, 131 Wolf Rd. A coffee hour begins at 7:15 p.m.

The program, presented by Al Di Vito, service manager of Martin J. Kelly Oldsmobile, Inc., will feature a film, "A Mind of Her Own." Essentially a "powder puff mechanics course," it aims to give women drivers the know-how and confidence needed in situations where there's no help at hand, dealing with measures ranging from changing a tire to the use of a nylon stocking to replace a broken fan belt. There will also be a question and answer period.

Information, Leona Spread, 541-1372 evenings.

BUFFALO GROVE GARDENERS

A workshop on quilling, the art of constructing flowers and leaves from curled paper to make plaques, is planned for Tuesday's meeting of Buffalo Grove Garden Club. Entitled "An Old-Fashioned Art," the demonstration will be given by one of the members, Mrs. John Daniel. Visitors are welcome.

The group meets at 7:30 p.m. in Rupp Memorial Building on Dunham Road.

A horticulture talk on African violets will be given by Mrs. Gerald Richter. Information 537-5244.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Elgin-Schaumburg area alumnae of Alpha Chi Omega will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Bruce Tyler, 1405 Chantwell, Schaumburg. The program is "Gardening by the Galloping Greenhouse," designed to get green thumbs in shape. Plants will be for sale. Information 458-9449.

LA LECHE LEAGUE

Ask Andy

Hibernation—nature's time to rest

Andy sends a 28-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Sheila Ragozine, 11, of McDonald, Ohio, for her question:
DO HIBERNATING ANIMALS SLEEP CONTINUOUSLY?

It is nice to think that the lazy woodchuck wakes up Feb. 4 to survey the weather situation. However, the furry fellow is a true hibernator. And in hibernation an animal sinks into a deep coma and usually stays that way through the whole winter. However, the term hibernator has been stretched to include light sleepers such as the bear. And old grumpy may wake up now and then.

In the world of nature, winter is a time of rest and relaxation. Jack Frost freezes the ground, and the north wind spreads a blanket of feathery white snow on the ground. Plant growth is limited. Certainly this is no time to sprout tender leaves, blossoms and seeds.

The air is too chilly for bees and butterflies and for coldblooded creatures and animals that feed on grassy greenery. The birds have flown south to warmer climates where food is still plentiful. The bees are huddled in their weatherproof hive, feeding on their stores of honey. Other winged insects have died, leaving their weatherproofed eggs and pupae to hatch in the spring.

Many animals cope with the winter months by sinking into the deep sleep of hibernation. During the fall, they eat extra food and grow fat. Their stores of fat are barely enough to keep them alive during the long fast. But during hibernation they are barely alive. Breathing, heartbeat and all other body processes slow down almost to a stop. The hibernating animal actually goes into a coma.

Frogs and toads, snakes and lizards are true hibernators. So are bats, woodchucks and chipmunks. Even the whippoorwill hibernates. All of these animals find secretive hideaways. Toads and woodchucks burrow down below the frost. As a rule, hibernators are not bothered by the cold, and we are told that fishes can survive being frozen.

Nothing disturbs a true hibernator until the first warm breath of spring arrives. This is the message that wakes up their dormant bodies. However, sometimes the weather brings a warm spell in mid-winter, especially in milder climates. This can wake a snake for a while, though he soon goes back into hibernation. But as a general rule a true hibernator sleeps continuously through the whole winter.

When winter comes most wild bears hole up in shallow dens and go to sleep. However, they do not sink into the deep coma of hibernation. Now and then they wake up and take a short walk, perhaps to go to the bathroom. Bears that live in zoos usually stay active all winter, most likely to avoid missing a handout.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Dale Arnold, 9, of St. Catharines, Ont., Canada, for his question:
WHERE DO WE FIND SEA CUCUMBERS?

Real cucumbers grow on bushy plants in the vegetable garden. The sea cucumber looks somewhat like a long chubby cucumber vegetable. But the two are not related at all. For one thing, the sea cucumber is not a plant. He is an animal whose home is in the sea. His long cucumber-shape body may be gray or brown, yellow or pink, red or purple. Or he may wear a patchwork of colors.

Though the sea cucumber belongs to the sea, he is no swimmer. He has rows of strange little feet, like tiny tubes, which he uses to crawl around on the bottom of the sea. We may find him in shallow water, just a few yards from the waves on the beach. Other sea cucumbers live farther out to sea, where the water is 600 feet deep. And some of their cousins live way out where the water is very deep. Sea cucumbers are plentiful in the worldwide oceans, though most of them prefer fairly warmish sea water.

Low cost taxi plan for aged in jeopardy

The rising cost of the senior citizen taxi program in Des Plaines could lead to a fare hike or discontinuation of the program, Ald. George Olen, 2nd, said.

Olen, chairman of the city council's special transportation committee, said the future of the taxi program will be discussed in a committee meeting tonight.

"It's beginning to look like the cost of the program in the coming year may be beyond our means," Olen said. "We'll be looking into it."

Olen said the city appropriated $38,000 for the taxi program, which permits senior citizens to use taxis at a low cost. But the program is expected to cost between $40,000 and $45,000 this year, more than the city may be willing to pay in subsidies to the city's taxi companies.

"THIS NIGHT require an increase in fares or cutting the program," Olen said.

Currently, senior citizens may take a taxi to any part of the city for only 50 cents. The remainder of the fare cost is billed to the city. More elderly are taking advantage of the program, increasing the cost to city taxpayers.

There has been discussion about appropriating as much as $40,000 from federal revenue-sharing funds to support the program, but efforts by the city to cut costs and balance the budget may force the rate increase.

The special transportation committee will meet at 7 p.m. in the Des Plaines Civic Center.

In U.S. motor fuel funds

Officials mull $1.1 million use

Des Plaines officials will meet tonight to discuss possible uses for $1.1 million in federal revenue-sharing and motor fuel tax funds expected this year.

Duane Bilezik, city comptroller, said aldermen and department heads will review expenditures as part of the ongoing budget-making process.

Des Plaines officials expect to receive about $804,000 in revenue-sharing funds and more than $300,000 in motor fuel tax funds this year, Bilezik said.

In the past, most of the money has gone for public works and other capital improvement programs.

"We've spent a good deal of the money on environmental conservation — a big word for flood control," Bilezik said, "that includes retention basins, storm sewers and other projects."

The city council's finance committee has recommended an expenditure of $80,000 this year to buy a bookmobile for the Des Plaines Public Library, but that's the only definite appropriation proposal.

"We'll be talking it over to see just where we should go with the money," Bilezik said.

The comptroller said officials will consider purchasing public works and equipment, fire department apparatus and expenditures for sewer construction and the police garage next to the civic center.

Past uses for federal revenue-sharing and motor fuel tax funds have included $40,000 a year for the senior citizen taxi program, donations to the park district and money for a bike path around Lake Opeta.

Officials will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Des Plaines Civic Center.

Shop owner fears ripoff, nabs suspect in burglary

Alfred Wood was worried about burglars breaking into his Des Plaines business, and so Friday night he stayed overnight in his garage and caught a burglary suspect.

Wood, 44, was awakened about 9:30 a.m. Saturday by noises at the garage door of Red Wood Service, 1223 Harding Ave. The door opened, and a man entered, saw Wood and fled, police said.

Wood went outside and fired a warning gunshot into the air to stop the fleeing suspect, but the man kept running, police reported. A second man was discovered near a car just outside the garage, and Wood ordered him to drive him to the police station, police said.

The suspect who fled was later arrested. He was identified as Craig A. Busch, 17, of 1512 Perry St., Des Plaines. He was charged with burglary. The other man, John C. Thompson, 28, of 1046 River Rd., Des Plaines, was charged with attempted burglary.

Wood told police he had noticed

Thursday someone had tampered with the door lock to his business.

Busch and Thompson were released after posting $1,500 bond each pending appearances Feb. 6 in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1406 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said. Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said: "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

Group looks out for former GIs

Cooties just love to bug veterans

by DIANE MERNIGAS
Smile when you call Carl Ekx a Cootie.
It's not that he'll mind the term. He considers it a compliment.
That ugly green bug is a symbol of brotherhood to Ekx and other members of the Military Order of the Cooties, Des Plaines.
The bug is the official insignia of the national honorary auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars which prides itself on remembering forgotten soldiers — soldiers who are confined to veterans' hospitals with mental or physical disorders resulting from America's wars.
EKX, PRESIDENT of the group, says he knows their frustration and pain since he spent more than a year in rehabilitation following World War II.
He and about 30 other Cooties don't mind spending their free time entertaining and cheering up war veterans in local hospitals like Downey and Hines.

They also make sure that the wives and children of fellow vets have a roof over their heads and enough food on the table.
The Cooties take a light-hearted approach to being their brothers' keepers. Their humor is evident not only in the national organization's chosen name, but in the members' titles and uniforms.
The order was formed in 1920 as a social group for World War I veterans. The group soon turned its focus to brightening up the days of those who returned from the war on stretchers, he said.
"GUYS OFTEN got lice or cooties in their hair while they were fighting abroad. It was sort of comical, so we decided that it would be funny to have the cootie be the organization symbol," Ekx said.

The name was obviously an effective choice since it spurs a burst of laughter from most people, he said.
And if that isn't enough, group members are given uncanny titles of command like Seam Squirel, Blanket Bum and Hide Gimlet.
They wear bright red-and-white uniforms on their monthly visits to veterans' hospitals. Their shirts have a large cootie embroidered on the back, and gold tassels on Shriner-style caps.
"The uniforms are really enough to brighten up the room," Ekx said, "but, we want to keep 'em smiling, and we'll do it any way that we can."
THE COOTIES of Pup Tent No. 28

in Des Plaines take their high spirits and humor to veterans' hospitals in the form of bingo games, belly dancers, live bands and other entertainment.
They often bring along playing cards, books, magazines, clothes and personal items for the hospital-bound vets, he said.
The Cooties also sponsor trips to professional baseball games and outings with the proceeds from fund-raising dinners and sales.
But, to many hospitalized vets, the greatest gift the Cooties bring each visit is conversation and companionship.

Truman-MacArthur feud

Old Soldier's last battle recollected by area man

by MIKE KLEIN

Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.

Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman?

That is for American historians to decide.

More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.

IT WAS NEWS this week.

On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Missourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide Col. Laurence Bunker.

Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.

"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.

Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.

Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.

"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.

"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.

"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."

Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June 1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.

"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.

Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.

"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.

MacARTHUR thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."

The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.

Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."

Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearcut winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate.

"You're involved with a military principle," Showers said. "Would it (an escalated American effort in Korea, as MacArthur wished) have brought the Chinese and Russians in full blast?"

"TRUMAN WAS the guy responsible for making a decision. He had to say no to MacArthur," said Showers.

So Douglas ("Old soldiers never die; They only fade away") MacArthur came up against Harry ("The buck stops here") Truman.

And the debate still rages over who won that battle of American heavyweights.

Village OK expected for housing code

A housing code aimed at upgrading substandard housing is expected to be approved tonight by the Wheeling Village Board.

The code will establish minimum living standards for existing buildings, including basic requirements for heating, electricity and plumbing, said Thomas Marcus, assistant village manager. It also governs the exterior appearances of buildings and prohibits the accumulation of rubbish and trash. Property owners also will be required to keep open areas free from weeds.

If the code is approved, the village will be able to cite property owners for violations and can declare structures unfit for human occupation. Marcus said the code is needed if the village is to solve substandard housing problems.

THE BOARD also will act on an ordinance reducing to three the number of scavenger licenses issued by the village. Wheeling ordinance previously limited the number of licenses to four, but only three had been issued to disposal firms.

Trustees decided to review the ordinance after learning that as many as six unlicensed companies have been operating in Wheeling. Representatives of the three licensed firms have said they are capable of handling current and future refuse problems in the village and had criticized officials for failing to stop unlicensed operators.

Village officials have since ordered the unlicensed scavengers to stop service.

The board will meet at 8 p.m. today at the village hall, 235 W. Dundee Rd.

At Mallard Lake

Boycott threat at apartments

More than 470 residents of Mallard Lake Apartments in Wheeling are planning a rent boycott next month to protest poor living conditions.

Resident Karen Henning, an organizer of the boycott, said owners of the complex have turned off heat in the hallways to save money. She said the owners, Celsel and McGuire Industries, refuse to meet with tenants to discuss the problem.

Mrs. Henning said wires in the heating system were "pulled out" several weeks ago, leaving hallways exposed to subzero temperatures.

"IT HAS been so cold that we have to wear our coats to do our laundry because the laundry rooms are in the hallways. The maintenance people can't even scrub the hallway floors because the water will freeze," she said.

Leases for the tenants, some of whom pay a monthly rent of $330, provide for sufficient heating throughout the building, Mrs. Henning said.

Other problems cited by tenants include broken entrance door locks and improperly sealed windows and sliding glass doors.

Mrs. Henning said cold air leaks in through many of the windows and that some tenants have had to raise their thermostats to 80 degrees to keep warm.

Tenants also are supposed to be provided draperies for their apartments and many have been waiting for several months, Mrs. Henning added.

A DOOR-TO-DOOR campaign to inform residents of the problems and gain their support in the boycott will begin this weekend, Mrs. Henning said.

"We have the support of about 30 per cent of the complex and we're looking for support from everyone here. Unless we hear from the owners or meet with them, we plan to boycott rent beginning Feb. 1," she said.

The apartment complex management Sunday refused to comment on the issue.

The Wheeling Village Board is considering a housing code which would establish minimum living standards for existing buildings, including basic requirements for heat. Problems residents have with apartment owners could be resolved through the code.

Horcher to meet with village cops

Wheeling Police Chief M. O. Horcher will meet with village patrolmen to discuss his controversial pay cut proposal.

Leonard Jaglarski, executive vice president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., Sunday said Horcher's plans to discuss pay cuts with his men is a "progressive" move and may possibly defuse the controversy in the police department concerning the pay cuts.

Horcher has proposed that salaries be trimmed for policemen not working hard enough.

Horcher's plans to meet with the policemen were arranged last week during a meeting between Jaglarski and Horcher. Jaglarski told village policemen about Horcher's plans at a union meeting Saturday.

"IT'S A GOOD shot," Jaglarski said. "I think the chief took a very progressive step in building up communications with his men."

Jaglarski expressed optimism that communication would build up rapport within the department, helping to resolve internal problems.

Police concern erupted about two weeks ago after Patrolman Frank Murphy was denied an automatic pay raise for a number of reasons, including issuance of an insufficient amount of traffic tickets.

Some policemen have been upset, believing the pay denial established a ticket quota for the department. Horcher said the department does not have a quota policy, but that the number of tickets issued by a policeman indicates how hard he is working.

Horcher has declared a hard-line policy since a study showed a few policemen were handing out as little as five tickets in a six-month period. Horcher has noted the same officers had issued as many as 86 tickets in a similar period.

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 50's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said.

Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said: "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

Village, 'Whipple' meet on garage dispute Jan. 26

Residents of the Whipple Tree Village mobile home park will meet Jan. 26 with Wheeling village trustees to resolve a dispute over illegal garages in the park.

Trustee Gilbert Monoson said trustees will ask for recommendations on the issue from the village attorney and building commissioner.

"I want to get this thing settled once and for all for the people of Whipple Tree Village," he said.

About 50 residents of Whipple Tree were notified by the village that garages attached to their mobile homes are in violation of village building codes.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS are reluctant to order removal of the garages because residents believed they were acting within the law and say past village administrations did nothing about the violations.

State statutes do not permit construction of permanent attached structures to mobile homes. Garages, carports and other structures are permitted only if there is a 10-foot separation between structures built of fire-resistant material.

Monoson said officials hope to reach a settlement which will permit the garages to remain on residents' properties. He said Whipple Tree residents "didn't realize that attached garages put them into a different zoning and tax bracket."

Building Comr. Walter Repholz issued stop work orders last fall on four structures under construction, ordering them to be dismantled. The first order was issued to William Bieber, former building commissioner.

REPHOLZ SAID the problems at Whipple Tree were discovered when he toured the mobile home park and discovered attached garages were being built. He said they constitute fire and other safety hazards.

Repholz and Monoson said owners of the trailer park told residents construction of the garages was permitted. Wheeling Bank and Savings Trust holds title of the trailer park in a land trust, Monoson said. Ernie Stavros, brother of former Wheeling Democratic Township Committeeman James Stavros, runs the operation.

Officials said they believe the village must prohibit the construction of the permanent garages in the future, adding it would be difficult to do something about the garages already constructed.

The board will meet with Whipple Tree residents at 7 p.m. Jan. 26 at the municipal building, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Water rate plan before village today

A new water rate structure calling for a flat water usage rate of $1 per 1,000 gallons will be recommended to the Buffalo Grove Village Board at a meeting tonight.

The session gets under way at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Members of a special water rate study committee will make a presentation to explain the proposed new rate.

Trustee Clarice Rech, who chaired the committee, said officials hope residents will attend the session to find out "what the new rate is all about."

"I hope there will be some people who will be able to come and understand and listen to the full presentation in regard to what our report is — and also to get their input," she said.

UNDER THE proposed rate, water bills would drop slightly for low-volume water users, but would increase for users of large amounts, officials say.

In addition to the flat rate, the recommendation also calls for elimination tion of the 5,000-gallon monthly minimum. Also proposed, however, is a $6 base charge per consumer per month to cover costs of village bond indebtedness.

Until the year 2000, the village must pay off bonds sold in 1970 that were used to pay for a utility system and major repair in the waterworks system.

Last year, Village Pres. Edward Fabish appointed the committee to study Buffalo Grove's controversial water rates that had come under criticism by officials and residents as being too high and unfair to low-volume water users.

For their water, village residents currently pay $1.50 for the first 5,000 gallons used and $1.20 per 1,000 gallons up to 30,000. After that the rate falls to 90 cents per 1,000 gallons.

The committee had also looked at the possibility of rolling back all water rates but said that would have decreased water works' revenue, something the village cannot afford at this time, Mrs. Rech said.

Free rides end

Pace, cost hit FISH fatally

The Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Prospect Heights chapter of FISH, which provided transportation for residents, has disbanded because of increasing demand on the time of volunteers.

Loni Milz, a FISH board member, said the group could no longer keep up with the pace and cost of transportation requests. The group's 50 volunteers provided the free transportation service to senior citizens and other residents for more than seven years.

"A lot of people of all ages have depended on us for a long time, and I honestly don't know who they are turning to now," she said. "It's a real dilemma."

THE ORGANIZATION'S volunteer workers were available each day to transport residents to doctors' offices and hospitals to fill any other emergency transportation needs. But demands for rides increased faster than the FISH group could keep up with them. Gasoline and other transportation costs paid by the volunteers were too great.

"We served hundreds of people each year," said Mrs. Milz. "Some residents we served time after time, providing with free rides to regular doctors' appointments, and then waiting to bring them home again. It took lots of time."

Mrs. Milz said the vacuum left by the demise of FISH may be filled by fire departments, local government agencies and church groups which offer the same kind of service.

Free bus programs in most townships can provide transportation with the aid of tax or federal revenue sharing money, making individual financial contributions unnecessary.

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 50's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said. Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said: "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

NIPC OKs Long Grove sewer interceptor plan

The proposed sewer interceptor through Long Grove has been approved by the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

The line, proposed by the Lake County Public Works Dept., will connect the communities of Forest Lake, Hawthorn Woods and Kildeer to the county's Des Plaines River Sewer Treatment Plant.

An expansion of the Des Plaines plant from a 2 million gallon per day capacity to 8 million gallon per day was also approved by NIPC.

The interceptor sewer and plant expansion plans will be sent to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for review and then will be reviewed again by the Lake County Regional Planning Commission and NIPC.

Expansion of the sewer plant will cost an estimated $4.8 million, and the interceptor is expected to cost more than $12 million. Both are to be 75 per cent funded by the federal EPA, with the remainder paid by Lake County.

Truman-MacArthur feud

Old Soldier's last battle recalled

by MIKE KLEIN

Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.

Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman?

That is for American historians to decide.

More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.

IT WAS NEWS this week.

On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Missourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide Col. Laurence Bunker.

Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.

"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.

Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.

Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.

"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.

"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.

"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."

Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June 1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.

"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.

BURT SHOWERS, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School, drew maps for Gen. Douglas MacArthur during late stages of World War II. He says there will never be a clearcut winner in the debate which has waged more than 20 years about MacArthur's recall by then-President Truman during the Korean War. (Photo by Mike Seeling)

Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.

"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.

MacARTHUR thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."

The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.

Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."

Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearcut winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate.

"You're involved with a military principle," Showers said. "Would it (an escalated American effort in Korea, as MacArthur wished) have brought the Chinese and Russians in full blast?"

"TRUMAN WAS the guy responsible for making a decision. He had to say no to MacArthur," said Showers.

So Douglas ("Old soldiers never die; They only fade away") MacArthur came up against Harry ("The buck stops here") Truman.

And the debate still rages over who won that battle of American heavyweights.

New building law nears completion

A new planned-unit development ordinance for Elk Grove Village that will allow new concepts in building is near completion.

A special ad hoc committee of trustees and the village's plan commission met Saturday to review and set criteria for the apartment portion of the ordinance the group has been attempting to write for several months.

Trustee Edward Kenna, chairman of the group, said it has been meeting with Centex Homes Corp., major developer of Elk Grove Village, in an attempt to expedite the builder's plans for development of its remaining 685 acres of land west of Meacham Road.

THE BUILDER has proposed a new building concept for Elk Grove Village which includes zero-lot line single-family housing which does not have the conventional side or rear yards; a mix of townhouse apartments; and single-family homes with side and rear yards.

The apartment portion of the ordinance reviewed Saturday calls for 15 units to an acre, but has special provisions to allow up to 20 units if there is more open space around taller buildings or if underground parking is provided.

The apartment area is north of the natural gas pipeline near Schaumburg and Biesterfeld roads, adjoining apartment development in neighboring Schaumburg.

Kenna Saturday asked Centex representatives to present sample engineering and development plans on the zero-lot line portion of the proposed development.

"Once we review this newest concept in building for our village, the committee can begin establishing zoning criteria for this final portion of the ordinance," Kenna said.

THE COMPLETE ordinance will then be reviewed, written, and given to the plan commission and village board for action, Kenna said. "The special ad hoc committee's sole purpose is to get Centex's plan to a public hearing of the plan commission," Kenna said.

He said the ad hoc committee, has reviewed the new ordinance but has not granted the developer zoning changes.

"We've worked with the builder in an attempt to create a zoning ordinance which establishes new criteria. The committee in no way circumvents the plan commission," Kenna said. "We realized after months of hearings before the plan commission that the village would have to create a new ordinance that takes into consideration new concepts like zero-lot line housing," Kenna said.

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 58's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said.

Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said: "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

At 'rap sessions'

Dist. 211 hears younger voices

by DOROTHY OLIVER

They sat comfortably around the table — clean-cut, all-American, well-groomed and polished, representing the "involved kids" who keep things rolling in a high school district of 10,000 students.

And they were not the least intimidated by the seven High School Dist. 211 board members who sat among them and encouraged students' words of praise and criticism of district programs, curriculum and discipline.

Ten students, representing the student councils of the five high schools in Dist. 211, joined the board Thursday night to discuss topics ranging from course offerings to smoking in the washrooms for the third annual Dist. 211 rap session.

THE STUDENTS were united in their request for an expanded curriculum, more field trips and student representation on the board — all topics that were raised in past rap sessions.

"We need a wider variety of courses to be offered at school," said Jamie Christopher, Palatine High School. Jamie and other students suggested extending the curriculum to include elective courses in religion, photography, foreign relations, contemporary literature, contemporary humanities, investment and government.

Most of the students asked for courses that would be more relevant to what is happening in the world today or courses that dealt with specifics such as taxes or the economy in addition to general courses touching on numerous topics.

They also brought up their unanimous concern that students in Dist. 211 are not being adequately prepared to go on to college.

"I KNOW A lot of kids coming back from college are just irate. There seems to be a serious lack of mechanical English training in the high schools," said Glenn Killoran, Fremd High School.

"Kids I know in college are saying that the courses they took in high school didn't prepare them," agreed Sue Stathopoulos, Schaumburg High School. "Courses should be more geared toward continuing education onward. Kids are saying they didn't teach enough, didn't push hard enough" in high school.

"You have to know how to write to communicate. If kids coming out of the district are not able to write, the district is not living up to its responsibility," said Mark Levine, Conant High School.

Board members welcomed the students' comments and Board Pres. Robert Creek explained that the district has already taken steps to implement "survival skills" tests to make sure all students have mastered the basics of math and English before graduating.

"I think we're thinking along the same lines — back to the basics," said Creek.

STUDENTS ALSO revived the time-worn request for an ex-officio student representative to sit on the board of education as a nonvoting member.

The idea of formal student representation has been brought to the board periodically since 1973, when Fremd High School students asked

A shy "nonvoter" gets the governor's attention along the "handshake tour."

Truman-MacArthur feud

Old Soldier's last battle recollected by area man

by MIKE KLEIN
Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.
Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman?
That is for American historians to decide.
More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.
IT WAS NEWS this week.
On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Mis-sourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide Col. Laurence Bunker.
Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.
"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.
Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.
Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.
"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.
"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.
"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."
Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June 1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.
"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.
Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.
"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.
MacArthur thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."
The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.
Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."
Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearcut winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate.
"You're involved with a military principle," Showers said. "Would it (an escalated American effort in Korea, as MacArthur wished) have brought the Chinese and Russians in full blast?"
"TRUMAN WAS the guy responsible for making a decision. He had to say no to MacArthur," said Showers.
So Douglas ("Old soldiers never die; they only fade away") MacArthur came up against Harry ("The buck stops here") Truman.
And the debate still rages over who won that battle of American heavy-weights.

BURT SHOWERS, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School, drew maps for Gen. Douglas MacArthur during late stages of World War II. He says there will never be a clearcut winner in the debate which has waged more than 20 years about MacArthur's recall by then-President Truman during the Korean War. (Photo by Mike Seeling) that a student from each high school sit on the board.

Creek assured the students that "anytime anyone wants to sit in the audience" and raise questions or give information, the board will allow the person to speak. Board member Robert Seger added that people who wanted to address the board "won't be told to go away" and questioned if any students have an interest in board meetings and would take the time to come.
"It would be of benefit to the school board and students to have a student as a nonvoting member," said Shan Bailey of Conant. "There is a different relationship (with the board) between being in the audience and being up here." Sitting in the audience, people have a tendency to hold back and not interrupt the board, she said, but being a member of the board would allow a student to "get to know you as human beings."
BOARD MEMBER Jean Flisler agreed with the young people that the board would benefit from having a student representative.
Creek indicated the board would give serious consideration to the proposal in the future and students would be notified on their decision.
Students also praised the value of field trips and learning that takes place out of school and asked the board to look into offering more.

"Kids enjoy it," said Bailey. "If we had more we might have fewer kids that feel closed in by the building. There wouldn't be such prison atmosphere."
MARY SANTY of Palatine High School said students have "zero opportunity for field trips. I have been told by a lot of teachers that field trips have to be approved a year in advance and you never know what you're going to want to see that far in advance."
Mark Levine tempered the words of appreciated the board's efforts in expanding junior electives, adding swimming pools and auditoriums and implementing the student-suggested antivandalism program.
"We do appreciate what you're doing," said Bailey. "But more of this would help."
Students generally shied away from discussions on discipline and suspensions — topics that drew fire from young people at past rap sessions.
The Conant representatives declined to comment, stating they felt the issues had been dealt with previously and it would take hours of discussion to do it justice. "We'd rather spend the time on other things," said Bailey.

Hoffman High all-night fest to release tension of exams

Hoffman Estates High School students will have a chance to release the tension and anxiety that builds up during final exams at a student council-sponsored lock-in — an 8½ hour, all-night party at the school.
The High School Dist. 211 Board of Education gave quick approval last week to the lock-in, and student council representatives returned to school ready to sell tickets to the event.
The lock-in is the first to be conducted in the district. Hoffman principal Thomas Hillesheim said the idea came from a student who transferred to the high school from another school that sponsored similar activities.
THE LOCK-IN will begin at 11 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 22 following three days of final exams at the school. Students, who need parental permission to attend, will be required to remain in the building until 7:30 a.m. Friday when the lock-in ends.
The council is planning a number of supervised activities including movies, a discotheque, junior Olympics, athletic tournaments and discussion groups. Breakfast will be served from 6:30 to 7 a.m.

School clubs have been invited to set up food and game booths in the hallways, and sleeping rooms will be available for those who can't make it through the night.
Hillesheim said tickets at $3.50 will be sold in advance and a minimum of 200 students will be needed for the event to be held. A maximum of 400 students will be allowed.
STUDENTS WILL not be given tickets unless they have a parent-signed permission slip, and all parent signatures will be verified by student council members.
Faculty and police chaperones will rotate on three shifts, and a nurse will be in the school a all times.
Students Denise Taylor and Darrel Schoelling presented the idea to the board, and members complimented the students on their "creativity and initiative."

Shop owner fears ripoff, nabs suspect in burglary

Alfred Wood was worried about burglars breaking into his Des Plaines business, and so Friday night he stayed overnight in his garage and caught a burglary suspect.
Wood, 44, was awakened about 9:30 a.m. Saturday by noises at the garage door of Red Wood Service, 1222 Harding Ave. The door opened, and a man entered, saw Wood and fled, police said.
Wood went outside and fired a warning gunshot into the air to stop the fleeing suspect, but the man kept running, police reported. A second man was discovered near a car just outside the garage, and Wood ordered him to drive him to the police station, police said.

The suspect who fled was later arrested. He was identified as Craig A. Busch, 17, of 1312 Perry St., Des Plaines. He was charged with burglary.
The other man, John C. Thompson, 28, of 1648 River Rd., Des Plaines, was charged with attempted burglary.
Wood told police he had noticed Thursday someone had tampered with the door lock to his business.
Busch and Thompson were released after posting $1,500 bond each pending appearances Feb. 6 in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Guardsmen goal—a building corps can call home

EACH TIME the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps breaks into "Born Free" during its 1976 season, all members will pay tribute to

Denise Thomaszewski, who died recently. The Guardsmen have also organized a special "comp guard" in honor of their deceased

by PAT GERLACH
Any member of the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps can tell you a marching band isn't just 76 trombones in the big parade.

Hard work, long days of 10 to 12 hours of practice, immeasurable dedication and a vast number of headaches, mostly about money, go into the making of a top-notch award-winning drum corps.

The only reward comes when members are competing on a field or marching in a parade.

BUT THE closeness and kinship that develops among Guardsmen is a unique and enduring bond.

Near-family ties exist among corps members whether they live in neighboring communities of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates or travel to weekly practice from more distant towns like Kankakee and Belleville, Ill., or Clinton, Iowa.

And that's why each time the corps breaks into "Born Free" this year, its 160 members will, as a single unit, pay personal tribute to a very special Guardsman.

The corps has dedicated its 1976 season to Denise Thomaszewski, who died last month of a rare form of malignancy not fully diagnosed until after her death. She had been a Guardsman for five years.

Denise's mother, Rosemarie Thomas of Hoffman Estates, says her 18-year-old daughter was "a real Guardsmen groupie" who made an appearance at drum corps practice only three days before her death, despite being critically ill and suffering intense pain at the time.

DENISE LIVED and breathed the corps, Mrs. Thomas said, adding that her daughter chose to attend the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater because it is a drum corps school.

Though Mrs. Thomas grieves at losing her oldest child, she talked easily about the family's dedication to the Guardsmen to whom two other members also belong.

"These young people really amaze me. They care so much for perfection it's unbelievable," Mrs. Thomas said, describing how the corps provided a full military funeral and graveside ceremony for her daughter while maintaining strict discipline.

THE GUARDSMEN Drum and Bugle Corps of Mount Prospect was established in 1961 "to provide a constructive program for the youth of the Northwest suburbs," a corps brochure says. The unit moved to the Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area three years ago and hopes eventually to establish a permanent base in one of the towns.

"I guess you could say our ultimate hope is a building, probably rented, that we could really call 'Guardsmen Hall,' a facility that would be used for performances, practice, concerts, let alone a storage area for our equipment," Mrs. Thomas said.

Denise was buried on a late November Monday, the day drum corps practices are held, and Mrs. Thomas tells of attending that night's practice to "cheer the corps" and thank members. She also told them the family had established a memorial fund in Denise's name.

"The money we have received will be used to help some of the young people who have had to forsake trips to competitions because they just didn't have the money," she said.

The corps has an annual budget of from $50,000 to $60,000 which comes from funds raised privately, except for support from several groups which serve as token sponsors.

THE BALANCE of money comes from special fundraisers and $7 monthly dues from each member, though Mrs. Thomas points out the Guardsmen are always in need of money.

Full uniforms and musical instruments are provided by the corps without charge.

Last year the corps was chosen, primarily for its bright orange and black uniforms, for a Kentucky Fried Chicken television commercial which brought in an $8,000 windfall.

"We were grateful for the money, but it just didn't go too far because we had to pay corps members wages who took time off from jobs during the filming," Mrs. Thomas said.

She said the corps has "reluctantly" been forced to establish a $75-per-member fee for a travel fund, used to pay expenses during each summer when the corps travels to Philadelphia, Denver and elsewhere for competition.

"Many of these people are young, 14 and under and don't have jobs, so it can be rough," Mrs. Thomas said. Just days after Denise's death, the corps learned it could use a vacant warehouse in Schaumburg-Center Industrial Park until the facility is rented.

Group looks out for former GIs

Cooties just love to bug veterans

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Smile when you call Carl Ekx a Cootie.

It's not that he'll mind the term. He considers it a compliment.

That ugly green bug is a symbol of brotherhood to Ekx and other members of the Military Order of the Cooties, Des Plaines.

The bug is the official insignia of the national honorary auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars which prides itself on remembering forgotten soldiers — soldiers who are confined to veterans' hospitals with mental or physical disorders resulting from America's wars.

EKX, PRESIDENT of the group, says he knows their frustration and pain since he spent more than a year in rehabilitation following World War II.

He and about 30 other Cooties don't mind spending their free time entertaining and cheering up war veterans in local hospitals like Downey and Hines.

They also make sure that the wives and children of fellow vets have a roof over their heads and enough food on the table.

The Cooties take a light-hearted approach to being their brothers' keepers. Their humor is evident not only in the national organization's chosen name, but in the members' titles and uniforms.

The order was formed in 1920 as a social group for World War I veterans. The group soon turned its focus to brightening up the days of those who returned from the war on stretchers, he said.

"GUYS OFTEN got lice or cooties in their hair while they were fighting abroad. It was sort of comical, so we decided that it would be funny to have the cootie be the organization symbol," Ekx said.

The name was obviously an effective choice since it spurs a burst of laughter from most people, he said.

And if that isn't enough, group members are given uncanny titles of command like Seam Squirrel, Blanket Bum and Hide Gimlet.

They wear bright red-and-white uniforms on their monthly visits to veterans' hospitals. Their shirts have a large cootie embroidered on the back, and gold tassels on Shriner-style caps.

"The uniforms are really enough to brighten up the room," Ekx said, "but, we want to keep 'em smiling, and we'll do it any way that we can."

THE COOTIES of Pup Tent No. 28 in Des Plaines take their high spirits and humor to veterans' hospitals in the form of bingo games, belly dancers, live bands and other entertainment.

They often bring along playing cards, books, magazines, clothes and personal items for the hospital-bound vets, he said.

The Cooties also sponsor trips to professional baseball games and outings with the proceeds from fund-raising dinners and sales.

But, to many hospitalized vets, the greatest gift the Cooties bring each visit is conversation and companionship.

'Planets' plan before village panel tonight

Representatives of developer Lee N. Romano will attend tonight's meeting of Schaumburg's development committee to present witnesses expected to support the validity of the controversial Outer Planets project.

Donald Phares, an attorney for the developer, said he will ask development committee members to recommend the village board grant Romano another six-month extension on the start of the 238-acre futuristic city planned near Higgins Road and I-90.

"This development is far from dead and I intend to present witnesses who will document the financiality and marketing feasibility of Outer Planets," Phares said.

THE ATTORNEY said he understands the Romano project is one of approximately 15 Schaumburg developments in which construction has not begun within the time span allowed when zoning was granted.

"If the village decides to make a policy decision approving further extensions for all of these developments, fine, but absent that, I will ask for a six-month extension on the Romano project," Phares said.

Last month, committee members postponed discussion of the developments that have not met deadlines set for the start of construction pending advice from Village Planner Alan Saunders and the village legal committee.

Romano's compound would include

30 buildings ranging from 22 to 70 stories, an 80-story hotel, a 126-story office and residential building, a space needle and monorail.

Zoning for the project, obtained by Romano in 1968, lapsed when the state purchased 20 of his first 86 acres for right-of-way to connect I-90 with Ill. Rte. 53 and Higgins Road.

ROMANO RETURNED to Schaumburg in 1973 with his new plan, which adds a 66-acre and 74-acre parcel to the development.

Construction has not begun, although when the latest zoning was granted Romano was given one year in which to begin the project, which brought the target date to December 1974.

The developer benefited when, at the time his construction deadline expired, the village board granted all Schaumburg developers an automatic six-month extension because of economic conditions.

When he returned in June requesting another six-month extension, Romano told village officials he planned to begin construction by September. At that time Romano revealed the development had become a joint venture with Tishman Co., a New York construction and management firm.

Phase one of the development calls for four 32-story buildings. Two of the structures would contain condominium apartments. The others are planned for rental units.

8-acre addition

Parks center to double size

Schaumburg Park District's Meineke Community Center complex will more than double in size with the purchase of eight acres from village developer Neal Hunter of Lancer Corp.

Park board members have approved purchase of the property from Hunter for $130,000. The property also includes a storage barn and a house being used by Hunter as offices for Lancer Development. It is directly north of the seven-acre Meineke Center. Weathersfield Way near Beech Drive.

"It was an offer we really couldn't refuse. He (Hunter) needed the money and the park district needs the space," said Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation.

Park officials have been negotiating with Hunter for the property for several months Derda said. He said the land was owned by Hunter, not the development company.

"IT WAS REALLY a good opportunity at a tremendous price," Derda said, adding the property was purchased for less than $5,000 an acre below the price suggested in an independent appraisal obtained recently by the park district.

Derda said the land will be used "to expand the present Meineke Center site," adding planning for the expansion will begin in the park district's next capital development project.

He said the district has funds on hand for the purchase obtained from interest on several investments.

Derda said Hunter offered the site to the district when he abandoned plans to convert the barn to a restaurant, explaining the developer said he needed the money from the purchase to complete streets and live up to other commitments made to village officials for improvements in his Lancer Park subdivision.

FAA meeting on upgrading of airport tonight

The Federal Aviation Administration will conduct a public meeting in Schaumburg tonight to hear comments on improvements proposed at Schaumburg Airport.

Village officials are considering purchase and improvement of the 120-acre private field at Wright Boulevard and Irving Park Road.

Kenneth B. Wolmer, vice president and general manager of the airport, said he plans to testify at the 7:30 p.m. meeting in the Great Hall, 231 S. Civic Dr.

Wolmer said he has asked members of Schaumburg Pilots Assn. and managers of several area airports to attend the meeting in support of the proposal.

FAA officials say the meeting is open to the public though only testimony relating to "airspace aspects" of the suggested improvements will be allowed.

Representatives of a group known as Stop Schaumburg Airport Future Expansion and Schaumburg Citizens for Planned Progress have said they will appear at the meeting in opposition to village purchase and extension of the runway from 3,100 to 3,900 feet.

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said. Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

Board hears ideas on smoking, curricula

Youths speak out in Dist. 211

by DOROTHY OLIVER

They sat comfortably around the table — clean-cut, all-American, well-groomed and polished, representing the "involved kids" who keep things rolling in a high school district of 10,000 students.

And they were not the least intimidated by the seven High School Dist. 211 board members who sat among them and encouraged students' words of praise and criticism of district programs, curriculum and discipline.

Ten students, representing the student councils of the five high schools in Dist. 211, joined the board Thursday night to discuss topics ranging from course offerings to smoking in the washrooms for the third annual Dist. 211 rap session.

THE STUDENTS were united in their request for an expanded curriculum, more field trips and student representation on the board — all topics that were raised in past rap sessions.

"We need a wider variety of courses to be offered at school," said Jamie Christopher, Palatine High School. Jamie and other students suggested extending the curriculum to include elective courses in religion, photography, foreign relations, contemporary literature, contemporary humanities, investment and government.

Most of the students asked for courses that would be more relevant to what is happening in the world today or courses that dealt with specifics such as taxes or the economy in addition to general courses touching on numerous topics.

They also brought up their unanimous concern that students in Dist. 211 are not being adequately prepared to go on to college.

"I KNOW A lot of kids coming back from college are just irate. There seems to be a serious lack of mechanical English training in the high schools," said Glenn Killoren, Fremd High School.

"Kids I know in college are saying that the courses they took in high school didn't prepare them," agreed Sue Stathopoulos, Schaumburg High School. "Courses should be more geared toward continuing education onward. Kids are saying they didn't teach enough, didn't push hard enough" in high school.

"You have to know how to write to communicate. If kids coming out of the district are not able to write, the district is not living up to its responsibility," said Mark Levine, Conant High School.

Board members welcomed the students' comments and Board Pres. Robert Creek explained that the district has already taken steps to implement "survival skills" tests to make sure all students have mastered the basics of math and English before graduating.

"I think we're thinking along the same lines — back to the basics," said Creek.

STUDENTS ALSO revived the time-worn request for an ex-officio student representative to sit on the board of education as a nonvoting member.

The idea of formal student representation has been brought to the board periodically since 1973, when Fremd High School students asked that a student from each high school sit on the board.

Creek assured the students that "anytime anyone wants to sit in the audience" and raise questions or give information, the board will allow the person to speak. Board member Robert Seger added that people who wanted to address the board "won't be told to go away" and questioned if any students have an interest in board meetings and would take the time to come.

"It would be of benefit to the school board and students to have a student as a nonvoting member," said Shan Bailey of Conant. "There is a different relationship (with the board) between being in the audience and being up here." Sitting in the audience, people have a tendency to hold back and not interrupt the board, she said, but being a member of the board would allow a student to "get to know you as human beings."

BOARD MEMBER Jean Fiesler agreed with the young people that the board would benefit from having a student representative.

Creek indicated the board would give serious consideration to the proposal in the future and students would be notified on their decision.

Students also praised the value of field trips and learning that takes place out of school and asked the board to look into offering more.

"Kids enjoy it," said Bailey. "If we had more we might have fewer kids that feel closed in by the building. There wouldn't be such prison atmosphere."

MARY SANTY of Palatine High School said students have "zero opportunity for field trips. I have been told by a lot of teachers that field trips have to be approved a year in advance and you never know what you're going to want to see that far in advance."

Mark Levine tempered the words of appreciation the board's efforts in expanding junior electives, adding swimming pools and auditoriums and implementing the student-suggested anti-vandalism program.

"We do appreciate what you're doing," said Bailey. "But more of this would help."

Students generally shied away from discussions on discipline and suspensions — topics that drew fire from young people at past rap sessions.

The Conant representatives declined to comment, stating they felt the issues had been dealt with previously and it would take hours of discussion to do it justice. "We'd rather spend the time on other things," said Bailey.

Village seeks volunteers to conduct health survey

The Hoffman Estates Health Dept. is looking for volunteers to interview village residents for a health attitude survey, Health Director James Demos said.

"We need volunteers to interview 20 persons for the second part of our survey," Demos said. "We've finished the first part, and we're collecting the information from it."

The first part of the health survey, conducted to determine community health needs, concerns problems residents are having with doctors and dentists.

The second part of the survey, to be conducted as soon as interviewers are registered, deals with environmental problems experienced by community residents.

The entire study is expected to be completed by summer, Demos said. Northwestern University tentatively has agreed to work with Hoffman Estates compiling survey results.

"When we're finished with the study, we'll hopefully know what's lacking in present health care in Hoffman Estates, and we'll have something to guide us in preparing future avenues of health care," he said.

Volunteers should contact the health department, 682-9100.

The local scene

Shark exhibit this week

"Sharks, Tigers of the Sea," a new scientifically authentic exhibit, will be shown Thursday through Jan. 19 at Woodfield Shopping Center before beginning a national tour.

A highlight of the exhibit is a 20-foot replica of the Great White Shark, the largest of its kind. Preserved jaws of other man-eating sharks including the mako, tiger and blue will also be shown.

Fact sheets accompany the display and recorded phone messages reveal the history and mythology of the Great White Shark.

Garrett Glodek, ichthyologist on the staff of Chicago's Field Museum of Natural History, will speak Saturday and Sunday at 1 and 3 p.m. on "Sharks, Facts and Folklore." A question and answer period follows each lecture.

Woman, 25, faces bad check charges

A Chicago woman was arrested Friday night for passing 11 allegedly bad checks, totaling about $3,150, Schaumburg police said.

Charged with two counts of theft by deception over $150 was Jessie Wash, 25, of 5009 W. Washington Blvd.

She is accused of issuing nine bad checks, totaling $1,110, to J. C. Penney Co. store in the Woodfield Shopping Center Dec. 24 and Dec. 26. Mrs. Wash also made a down payment Dec. 24 for a 1976 Chrysler at Fireside Chrysler-Plymouth, 1020 E. Golf Rd., by passing two bad checks, totaling about $2,040, police said.

She was released after posting $10,000 in bonds pending an appearance Jan. 23 in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Hoffman High all-night fest to release tension of exams

Hoffman Estates High School students will have a chance to release the tension and anxiety that builds up during final exams at a student council-sponsored lock-in — an 8½ hour, all-night party at the school.

The High School Dist. 211 Board of Education gave quick approval last week to the lock-in, and student council representatives returned to school ready to sell tickets to the event.

The lock-in is the first to be conducted in the district. Hoffman principal Thomas Hillesheim said the idea came from a student who transferred to the high school from another school that sponsored similar activities.

THE LOCK-IN will begin at 11 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 22 following three days of final exams at the school. Students, who need parental permission to attend, will be required to remain in the building until 7:30 a.m. Friday when the lock-in ends.

The council is planning a number of supervised activities including movies, a discotheque, junior Olympics, athletic tournaments and discussion groups. Breakfast will be served from 6:30 to 7 a.m.

School clubs have been invited to set up food and game booths in the hallways, and sleeping rooms will be available for those who can't make it through the night.

Hillesheim said tickets at $3.50 will be sold in advance and a minimum of 200 students will be needed for the event to be held. A maximum of 400 students will be allowed.

STUDENTS WILL not be given tickets unless they have a parent-signed permission slip, and all parent signatures will be verified by student council members.

Faculty and police chaperones will rotate on three shifts, and a nurse will be in the school all times.

Students Denise Taylor and Darrel Schoelling presented the idea to the board, and members complimented the students on their "creativity and initiative."

Discussion on ERA set at women's club

A panel discussion on the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) will be sponsored today at 9:15 p.m. by the Hoffman Estates Women's Club, 161 Illinois Blvd.

Program director Karen Carroll said Village Pres. Virginia Hayter will lead the panel discussion on various aspects of the ERA. She said the public is invited to attend.

The discussion will follow the regular meeting of the women's club at 8 p.m. and cocktail hour at 7:30 p.m., she said.

Mrs. Carroll said additional information may be obtained by calling her at 882-6858.

Guardsmen goal—a building corps can call home

EACH TIME the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps breaks into "Born Free" during its 1976 season, all members will pay tribute to

Denise Thomaszewski, who died recently. The Guardsmen have also organized a special "comp guard" in honor of their deceased

by PAT GERLACH

Any member of the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps can tell you a marching band isn't just 76 trombones in the big parade.

Hard work, long days of 10 to 12 hours of practice, immeasurable dedication and a vast number of headaches, mostly about money, go into the making of a top-notch award-winning drum corps.

The only reward comes when members are competing on a field or marching in a parade.

BUT THE closeness and kinship that develops among Guardsmen is a unique and enduring bond.

Near-family ties exist among corps members whether they live in neighboring communities of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates or travel to weekly practice from more distant towns like Kankakee and Belleville, Ill., or Clinton, Iowa.

And that's why each time the corps breaks into "Born Free" this year, its 160 members will, as a single unit, pay personal tribute to a very special Guardsman.

The corps has dedicated its 1976 season to Denise Thomaszewski, who died last month of a rare form of malignancy not fully diagnosed until after her death. She had been a Guardsman for five years.

Denise's mother, Rosemarie Thomas of Hoffman Estates, says her 18-year-old daughter was "a real Guardsmen groupie" who made an appearance at drum corps practice only three days before her death, despite being critically ill and suffering intense pain at the time.

DENISE LIVED and breathed the corps, Mrs. Thomas said, adding that her daughter chose to attend the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater because it is a drum corps school.

Though Mrs. Thomas grieves at losing her oldest child, she talked easily about the family's dedication to the Guardsmen to whom two other members also belong.

"These young people really amaze me. They care so much for perfection it's unbelievable," Mrs. Thomas said, describing how the corps provided a full military funeral and graveside ceremony for her daughter while maintaining strict discipline.

THE GUARDSMEN Drum and Bugle Corps of Mount Prospect was established in 1961 "to provide a constructive program for the youth of the Northwest suburbs," a corps brochure says. The unit moved to the Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area three years ago and hopes eventually to establish a permanent base in one of the towns.

"I guess you could say our ultimate hope is a building, probably rented, that we could really call 'Guardsmen Hall,' a facility that would be used for performances, practice, concerts, let alone a storage area for our equipment," Mrs. Thomas said.

Denise was buried on a late November Monday, the day drum corps practices are held, and Mrs. Thomas tells of attending that night's practice to "cheer the corps" and thank members. She also told them the family had established a memorial fund in Denise's name.

"The money we have received will be used to help some of the young people who have had to forsake trips to competitions because they just didn't have the money," she said.

The corps has an annual budget of from $50,000 to $60,000 which comes from funds raised privately, except for support from several groups which serve as token sponsors.

THE BALANCE of money comes from special fundraisers and $7 monthly dues from each member, though Mrs. Thomas points out the Guardsmen are always in need of money.

Full uniforms and musical instruments are provided by the corps without charge.

Last year the corps was chosen, primarily for its bright orange and black uniforms, for a Kentucky Fried Chicken television commercial which brought in an $8,000 windfall.

"We were grateful for the money, but it just didn't go too far because we had to pay corps members wages who took time off from jobs during the filming," Mrs. Thomas said.

She said the corps has "reluctantly" been forced to establish a $75-per-member fee for a travel fund, used to pay expenses during each summer when the corps travels to Philadelphia, Denver and elsewhere for competition.

"Many of these people are young, 14 and under and don't have jobs, so it can be rough," Mrs. Thomas said.

Just days after Denise's death, the corps learned it could use a vacant warehouse in Schaumburg-Centex Industrial Park until the facility is rented.

Truman—MacArthur feud

Old Soldier's last battle recalled

by MIKE KLEIN

Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.

Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman?

That is for American historians to decide.

More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.

IT WAS NEWS this week.

On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Missourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide

Col. Laurence Bunker.

Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.

"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.

Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.

Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.

"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.

"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.

"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."

Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June 1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.

"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.

Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.

"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.

MacARTHUR thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."

The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.

Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."

Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearcut winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate.

"You're involved with a military principle," Showers said. "Would it (an escalated American effort in Korea, as MacArthur wished) have brought the Chinese and Russians in full blast?"

"TRUMAN WAS the guy responsible for making a decision. He had to say no to MacArthur," said Showers.

So Douglas ("Old soldiers never die; They only fade away") MacArthur came up against Harry ("The buck stops here") Truman.

And the debate still rages over who won that battle of American heavy-

Shop owner fears ripoff, nabs suspect in burglary

Alfred Wood was worried about burglars breaking into his Des Plaines business, and so Friday night he stayed overnight in his garage and caught a burglary suspect.

Wood, 44, was awakened about 9:30 a.m. Saturday by noises at the garage door of Red Wood Service, 1223 Harding Ave. The door opened, and a man entered, saw Wood and fled, police said.

Wood went outside and fired a warning gunshot into the air to stop the fleeing suspect, but the man kept running, police reported. A second man was discovered near a car just outside the garage, and Wood ordered him to drive him to the police station, police said.

The suspect who fled was later arrested. He was identified as Craig A. Busch, 17, of 1812 Perry St., Des Plaines. He was charged with burglary. The other man, John C. Thompson, 28, of 1848 River Rd., Des Plaines, was charged with attempted burglary.

Wood told police he had noticed Thursday someone had tampered with the door lock to his business.

Busch and Thompson were released after posting $1,500 bond each pending appearances Feb. 6 in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Hoffman man heads Twinbrook campaign

Larry Stoffer, 121 Kingsdale Rd., Hoffman Estates, has been named to head up a new branch of the Twinbrook YMCA's Family Builder Campaign.

Stoffer is undertaking the program in addition to his duties as member of the Twinbrook YMCA Board of Managers.

He will head the newly formed speakers' bureau which will provide an outlet for presentation of the YMCA story to organizations in the Twinbrook area that request information. The program contains a short slide presentation and field questions.

Any interested group may contact Stoffer through the YMCA office, 882-7250, or his home phone, 885-8356.

Nominations sought for Jaycees award

Schaumburg Jaycees are seeking nominees for the Outstanding Young Man of 1975.

The five finalists in the competition will be honored at the Jaycees annual awards banquet Feb. 7 at The Lancer Steak House restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd.

The award is presented annually by the Jaycees to a Schaumburg man, 21 through 35 years old, who has given outstanding service or made an exceptional personal contribution toward the betterment of the village.

Letters requesting names of nominees have been sent to the village police and fire departments, Schaumburg Rotary Club, Schaumburg Park District, Twinbrook YMCA and Schaumburg Athletic Assn.

Residents also are being encouraged to submit names for consideration. Deadline for submitting nominations to Harry Raimondi, 884-9789, is Saturday.

2 agencies try to reach unreachable

Two city agencies are attempting to reach the unreachable Rolling Meadows youngsters.

The Rolling Meadows Park District and city Youth and Family Referral Committee are working together to provide some form of activity to those youngsters who hang around but do not participate in organized activities now provided in the community.

"Those unreachable youngsters are our most difficult challenge," Rudy Nelson, superintendent of recreation, told the committee last week.

"We provide many recreational programs for the young people who take part in sports, games or other such activities. However, we have nothing for those who do not date, take part in any activity and come to the sports arena to just hang around," Nelson said.

NELSON ATTENDED last week's session of the referral committee to pledge the district's cooperation in a joint effort to reach the city's youth.

Robert Greco, a psychologist with the Northwest Human Resources Development Center, suggested the center occasionally send one of its counselors to the sports complex to mingle with young people.

Nelson said the district is not plagued with vandalism but is concerned about the potential for delinquency.

"We had a talk center because we thought it would serve the hang-around group. The talk center failed because it appears as if they run out of things to talk about and then start vandalizing," Nelson said.

"That proves teens need supervision, especially from their own parents," Police Chief Lewis R. Case, a member of the referral committee, said.

"THERE IS no juvenile delinquency, only parental delinquency in this city and throughout the nation," Case said.

"The responsibility belongs to the parent's and many leave their young children to their own resources and provide little if any home life," Case said.

Nelson said that attempts to involve parents in activities with their children are not meeting with success.

"The ice arena is offering free admission on Sundays to parents whose children pay the admission price. We've had only about three families take advantage of the free admission," Nelson said.

The agencies will continue to meet. Greco said that young people themselves may suggest the solution.

At 'rap sessions'

Dist. 211 hears younger voices

by DOROTHY OLIVER

They sat comfortably around the table — clean-cut, all-American, well-groomed and polished, representing the "involved kids" who keep things rolling in a high school district of 10,000 students.

And they were not the least intimidated by the seven High School Dist. 211 board members who sat among them and encouraged students' words of praise and criticism of district programs, curriculum and discipline.

Ten students, representing the student councils of the five high schools in Dist. 211, joined the board Thursday night to discuss topics ranging from course offerings to smoking in the washrooms for the third annual Dist. 211 rap session.

THE STUDENTS were united in their request for an expanded curriculum, more field trips and student representation on the board — all topics that were raised in past rap sessions.

"We need a wider variety of courses to be offered at school," said Jamie Christopher, Palatine High School. Jamie and other students suggested extending the curriculum to include elective courses in religion, photography, foreign relations, contemporary literature, contemporary humanities, investment and government.

Most of the students asked for courses that would be more relevant to what is happening in the world today or courses that dealt with specifics such as taxes or the economy in addition to general courses touching on numerous topics.

They also brought up their unanimous concern that students in Dist. 211 are not being adequately prepared to go on to college.

"I KNOW A lot of kids coming back from college are just irate. There seems to be a serious lack of mechanical English training in the high schools," said Glenn Killoren, Fremd High School.

"Kids I know in college are saying that the courses they took in high school didn't prepare them," agreed Sue Stathopoulos, Schaumburg High School. "Courses should be more geared toward continuing education onward. Kids are saying they didn't teach enough, didn't push hard enough" in high school.

"You have to know how to write to communicate. If kids coming out of the district are not able to write, the district is not living up to its responsibility," said Mark Levine, Conant High School.

Board members welcomed the students' comments and Board Pres. Robert Creek explained that the district has already taken steps to implement "survival skills" tests to make sure all students have mastered the basics of math and English before graduating.

"I think we're thinking along the same lines — back to the basics," said Creek.

STUDENTS ALSO revived the time-worn request for an ex-officio student representative to sit on the board of education as a nonvoting member.

The idea of formal student representation has been brought to the board periodically since 1973, when Fremd High School students asked that a student from each high school sit on the board.

Creek assured the students that "anytime anyone wants to sit in the audience" and raise questions or give information, the board will allow the

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said. Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said: "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

Night voter signup set at township hall

The Palatine Township Hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd., will be open Monday nights through Jan. 30 for voter registration.

Monday night hours are 7 to 9 p.m. The office also will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Jan. 30, the last day the township will handle voter registration before the March 16 primary.

Woman, 25, faces bad check charges

A Chicago woman was arrested Friday night for passing 11 allegedly bad checks, totaling about $3,150, Schaumburg police said.

Charged with two counts of theft by deception over $150 was Jessie Wash, 25, of 5009 W. Washington Blvd.

She is accused of issuing nine bad checks, totaling $1,110, to J. C. Penney Co. store in the Woodfield Shopping Center Dec. 24 and Dec. 26. Mrs. Wash also made a down payment Dec. 24 for a 1976 Chrysler at Fireside Chrysler-Plymouth, 1020 E. Golf Rd., by passing two bad checks, totaling about $2,040, police said.

She was released after posting $10,000 in bonds pending an appearance Jan. 28 in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

$1,530 in items taken at apartment

About $1,530 worth of jewelry and other items was reported stolen early Sunday after a break-in at the Louise Revell apartment, 115 E. Davis St., Arlington Heights.

Taken were a leather coat, two diamond rings, sapphire necklace, topaz ring and opal ring, pin, bracelet and earrings, police were told.

Burglars ransacked all the rooms of the house after forcing open a rear door sometime between 5:20 p.m. Saturday and 1 a.m. Sunday, police said.

Group looks out for former GIs

Cooties just love to bug veterans

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Smile when you call Carl Ekx a Cootie. It's not that he'll mind the term. He considers it a compliment.

That ugly green bug is a symbol of brotherhood to Ekx and other members of the Military Order of the Cooties, Des Plaines.

The bug is the official insignia of the national honorary auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars which prides itself on remembering forgotten soldiers — soldiers who are confined to veterans' hospitals with mental or physical disorders resulting from America's wars.

Ekx, president of the group, says he knows their frustration and pain since he spent more than a year in rehabilitation following World War II.

He and about 30 other Cooties don't mind spending their free time entertaining and cheering up war veterans in local hospitals like Downey and Hines.

They also make sure that the wives and children of fellow vets have a roof over their heads and enough food on the table.

The Cooties take a light-hearted approach to being their brothers' keepers. Their humor is evident not only in the national organization's chosen name, but in the members' titles and uniforms.

The order was formed in 1920 as a social group for World War I veterans. The group soon turned its focus to brightening up the days of those who returned from the war on stretchers, he said.

"GUYS OFTEN got lice or cooties in their hair while they were fighting abroad. It was sort of comical, so we decided that it would be funny to have the cootie be the organization symbol," Ekx said.

The name was obviously an effective choice since it spurs a burst of laughter from most people, he said.

And if that isn't enough, group members are given uncanny titles of command like Seam Squirrel, Blanket Bum and Hide Gimlet.

They wear bright red-and-white uniforms on their monthly visits to veterans' hospitals. Their shirts have a large cootie embroidered on the back, and gold tassels on Shriner-style caps.

"The uniforms are really enough to brighten up the room," Ekx said, "but, we want to keep 'em smiling, and we'll do it any way that we can."

THE COOTIES of Pup Tent No. 28 in Des Plaines take their high spirits and humor to veterans' hospitals in the form of bingo games, belly dancers, live bands and other entertainment.

They often bring along playing cards, books, magazines, clothes and personal items for the hospital-bound vets, he said.

The Cooties also sponsor trips to professional baseball games and outings with the proceeds from fund-raising dinners and sales.

But, to many hospitalized vets, the greatest gift the Cooties bring each visit is conversation and companionship.

person to speak. Board member Robert Seger added that people who wanted to address the board "won't be told to go away" and questioned if any students have an interest in board meetings and would take the time to come.

"It would be of benefit to the school board and students to have a student as a nonvoting member," said Shan Bailey of Conant. "There is a different relationship (with the board) between being in the audience and being up here." Sitting in the audience, people have a tendency to hold back and not interrupt the board, she said, but being a member of the board would allow a student to "get to know you as human beings."

BOARD MEMBER Jean Fislir agreed with the young people that the board would benefit from having a student representative.

Creek indicated the board would give serious consideration to the proposal in the future and students would be notified on their decision.

Students also praised the value of field trips and learning that takes place out of school and asked the board to look into offering more.

"Kids enjoy it," said Bailey. "If we had more we might have fewer kids that feel closed in by the building. There wouldn't be such prison atmosphere."

MARY SANTY of Palatine High School said students have "zero opportunity for field trips. I have been told by a lot of teachers that field trips have to be approved a year in advance and you never know what you're going to want to see that far in advance."

Mark Levine tempered the words of appreciation the board's efforts in expanding junior electives, adding swimming pools and auditoriums and implementing the student-suggested antivandalism program.

"We do appreciate what you're doing," said Bailey. "But more of this would help."

Students generally shied away from discussions on discipline and suspensions — topics that drew fire from young people at past rap sessions.

The Conant representatives declined to comment, stating they felt the issues had been dealt with previously and it would take hours of discussion to do it justice. "We'd rather spend the time on other things," said Bailey.

Hoffman High all-night fest to release tension of exams

Hoffman Estates High School students will have a chance to release the tension and anxiety that builds up during final exams at a student council-sponsored lock-in — an 8½ hour, all-night party at the school.

The High School Dist. 211 Board of Education gave quick approval last week to the lock-in, and student council representatives returned to school ready to sell tickets to the event.

The lock-in is the first to be conducted in the district. Hoffman principal Thomas Hillesheim said the idea came from a student who transferred to the high school from another school that sponsored similar activities.

THE LOCK-IN will begin at 11 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 22 following three days of final exams at the school. Students, who need parental permission to attend, will be required to remain in the building until 7:30 a.m. Friday when the lock-in ends.

The council is planning a number of supervised activities including movies, a discotheque, junior Olympics, athletic tournaments and discussion groups. Breakfast will be served from 6:30 to 7 a.m.

School clubs have been invited to set up food and game booths in the hallways, and sleeping rooms will be available for those who can't make it through the night.

Hillesheim said tickets at $3.50 will be sold in advance and a minimum of 200 students will be needed for the event to be held. A maximum of 400 students will be allowed.

STUDENTS WILL not be given tickets unless they have a parent-signed permission slip, and all parent signatures will be verified by student council members.

Faculty and police chaperones will rotate on three shifts, and a nurse will be in the school a all times.

Students Denise Taylor and Darrel Schoelling presented the idea to the board, and members complimented the students on their "creativity and initiative."

Guardsmen goal—a building corps can call home

EACH TIME the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps breaks into "Born Free" during its 1976 season, all members will pay tribute to

Denise Thomaszewski, who died recently. The Guardsmen have also organized a special "comp guard" in honor of their deceased

by PAT GERLACH

Any member of the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps can tell you a marching band isn't just 76 trombones in the big parade.

Hard work, long days of 10 to 12 hours of practice, immeasurable dedication and a vast number of headaches, mostly about money, go into the making of a top-notch award-winning drum corps.

The only reward comes when members are competing on a field or marching in a parade.

BUT THE closeness and kinship that develops among Guardsmen is a unique and enduring bond.

Near-family ties exist among corps members whether they live in neighboring communities of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates or travel to weekly practice from more distant towns like Kankakee and Belleville, Ill., or Clinton, Iowa.

And that's why each time the corps breaks into "Born Free" this year, its 160 members will, as a single unit, pay personal tribute to a very special Guardsman.

The corps has dedicated its 1976 season to Denise Thomaszewski, who died last month of a rare form of malignancy not fully diagnosed until after her death. She had been a Guardsman for five years.

Denise's mother, Rosemarie Thomas of Hoffman Estates, says her 18-year-old daughter was "a real Guardsmen groupie" who made an appearance at drum corps practice only three days before her death, despite being critically ill and suffering intense pain at the time.

DENISE LIVED and breathed the corps, Mrs. Thomas said, adding that her daughter chose to attend the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater because it is a drum corps school.

Though Mrs. Thomas grieves at losing her oldest child, she talked easily about the family's dedication to the Guardsmen to whom two other members also belong.

"These young people really amaze me. They care so much for perfection it's unbelievable," Mrs. Thomas said, describing how the corps provided a full military funeral and graveside ceremony for her daughter while maintaining strict discipline.

THE GUARDSMEN Drum and Bugle Corps of Mount Prospect was established in 1961 "to provide a constructive program for the youth of the Northwest suburbs," a corps brochure says. The unit moved to the Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area three years ago and hopes eventually to establish a permanent base in one of the towns.

"I guess you could say our ultimate hope is a building, probably rented, that we could really call 'Guardsmen Hall,' a facility that would be used for performances, practice, concerts, let alone a storage area for our equipment," Mrs. Thomas said.

Denise was buried on a late November Monday, the day drum corps practices are held, and Mrs. Thomas tells of attending that night's practice to "cheer the corps" and thank members. She also told them the family had established a memorial fund in Denise's name.

"The money we have received will be used to help some of the young people who have had to forsake trips to competitions because they just didn't have the money," she said.

The corps has an annual budget of from $50,000 to $60,000 which comes from funds raised privately, except for support from several groups which serve as token sponsors.

THE BALANCE of money comes from special fundraisers and $7 monthly dues from each member, though Mrs. Thomas points out the Guardsmen are always in need of money.

Full uniforms and musical instruments are provided by the corps without charge.

Last year the corps was chosen, primarily for its bright orange and black uniforms, for a Kentucky Fried Chicken television commercial which brought in an $8,000 windfall.

"We were grateful for the money, but it just didn't go too far because we had to pay corps members wages who took time off from jobs during the filming," Mrs. Thomas said.

She said the corps has "reluctantly" been forced to establish a $75-per-member fee for a travel fund, used to pay expenses during each summer when the corps travels to Philadelphia, Denver and elsewhere for competition.

"Many of these people are young, 14 and under and don't have jobs, so it can be rough," Mrs. Thomas said.

Just days after Denise's death, the corps learned it could use a vacant warehouse in Schaumburg-Centex Industrial Park until the facility is rented.

Truman—MacArthur feud

Old Soldier's last battle recalled

by MIKE KLEIN

Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.

Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman? That is for American historians to decide.

More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.

IT WAS NEWS this week.

On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Missourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide Col. Laurence Bunker.

Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.

"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.

Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.

Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.

"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.

"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.

"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."

Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June 1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.

"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.

Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.

"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.

MacARTHUR thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."

The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.

Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."

Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearout winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate. "You're involved with a military principle," Showers said. "Would it (an escalated American effort in Korea, as MacArthur wished) have brought the Chinese and Russians in full blast?"

"TRUMAN was the guy responsible for making a decision. He had to say no to MacArthur," said Showers.

So Douglas ("Old soldiers never die; They only fade away") MacArthur came up against Harry ("The buck stops here") Truman.

And the debate still rages over who won that battle of American heavyweights.

Shop owner fears ripoff, nabs suspect in burglary

Alfred Wood was worried about burglars breaking into his Des Plaines business, and so Friday night he stayed overnight in his garage and caught a burglary suspect.

Wood, 44, was awakened about 9:30 a.m. Saturday by noises at the garage door of Red Wood Service, 1222 Harding Ave. The door opened, and a man entered, saw Wood and fled, police said.

Wood went outside and fired a warning gunshot into the air to stop the fleeing suspect, but the man kept running, police reported. A second man was discovered near a car just outside the garage, and Wood ordered him to drive him to the police station, police said.

The suspect who fled was later arrested. He was identified as Craig A. Busch, 17, of 1312 Perry St., Des Plaines. He was charged with burglary. The other man, John C. Thompson, 28, of 1648 River Rd., Des Plaines, was charged with attempted burglary.

Wood told police he had noticed Thursday someone had tampered with the door lock to his business.

Busch and Thompson were released after posting $1,500 bond each pending appearances Feb. 6 in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Inverness skirts slump in housing

by LUISA GINETTI

The recession in the construction industry seems to have bypassed the Village of Inverness, where the number of newly-built single-family homes nearly doubled in 1975, the biggest construction boom in the village's history.

Village Clerk Sandy Johnson, said 29 homes in the price range of $80,000 to $220,000 were built in the village last year. The figure compares to 16 during both 1973 and 1974.

The sale of vacant lots ranging from $30,000 to $40,000 for up to 2.5 acres also is on the increase, she said, and there are no signs of a slowdown.

"I CAN'T FORESEE it stopping," Mrs. Johnson said. "People are calling here every day who have bought vacant lots in the subdivisions to build on in the spring."

She added that receipts from building permit fees will show an increase for fiscal 1975-76 because of the construction. The village's fiscal year ends April 30, so totals are not yet available.

Mrs. Johnson said Inverness contracts with the Village of Barrington to perform building inspections for newly-constructed homes. Officials in Barrington said 80 per cent of their inspections are done in Inverness, a direct result of the village's construction growth, Mrs. Johnson added.

Trustee Al Ruck said the phenomenon has been a topic of discussion among village officials as well, who have no explanation for the sudden construction swell.

"Either the area is starting to attract more buyers or people with money are starting to move here or the banks are more willing to give out mortgages," Ruck said.

ALTHOUGH COMPLETE figures are not available for Palatine, Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig described a contrasting construction picture to that of its wealthier neighbor.

Harwig said construction has been slow with building permit fees totaling $20,645 through November 1975, compared to $23,776 for the same period in 1974. He said the village has budgeted $35,000 for anticipated revenue from building permit fees.

Racing panel OKs fire code

by JOE SWICKARD

A new fire safety code, which will cover all future construction at Arlington Park Race Track, has been adopted by the Illinois Racing Board.

The new code, which will take effect 10 days after it is filed with the secretary of state, will cover all new construction and existing buildings undergoing expansion or remodeling at Illinois racetracks.

A $1 million construction project at Arlington Park Race Track will bring the barn and dormitory areas into compliance with the new codes. The track's construction plans were approved by the village in October.

RACING BOARD member Lucy

Reum said the stable fire Thursday in Libertyville, in which 21 show horses were killed, underscored the need for stringent fire codes.

"The vulnerability of tracks to fires and the tragic consequences are well known by now," Mrs. Reum said.

The new code calls for the following modification of existing structures:

- Installation of automatic sprinklers in grandstands within two years.

- Wooden barns be replaced with masonry barns at the rate of 20 per cent annually, or be equipped with automatic sprinklers at the rate of 20 per cent annually.

- Dormitories without sprinklers be equipped with automatic fire alarms with fire detectors in every room unless the rooms are separated by fire walls and have a direct exit to the outside.

The code for new dormitories will require:

- Sleeping rooms separated from each other by fire resistant walls.

- Automatic fire alarm and detection systems in all rooms. The detectors will not be required in rooms with sprinklers and a direct outside exit.

The code requires that at least one trained fireman patrol the grandstands when the stands are in-use. During the racing season, track personnel will undergo instruction in fire reporting methods, basic fire pre-

Gov. Daniel Walker ponders his late arrival to the Northwest suburbs Saturday while en route to Randhurst.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said.

Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said: "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

Panel to weigh cash for historic signs for homes

Funding for markers to designate historical landmarks in Palatine will be discussed tonight by the administration, finance and legislation committee.

Village officials have been provided a list of 16 homes in Palatine which are more than 100 years old. The committee will make a recommendation on the markers to the village board.

The village board also is scheduled to discuss the matter tonight following the committee meeting.

The committee will meet at 8 p.m. at the Palatine Public Library, 300 N. Benton St. The village board meeting will begin at 9 p.m.

Also on the board agenda is an ordinance reducing the speed limit on residential streets in the village from 30 to 25 miles per hour.

The board voted in November to reduce the speed on secondary streets based on findings of a traffic-control study done by Barton-Aschmann and Associates, Evanston.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones will give his annual state-of-the-village address at 9 p.m. before the board meeting begins.

SINGLE-FAMILY home construction in Inverness was the highest in the village's history in 1975. This house on Balmoral Lane is one of many under construction as the wealthy community continues to attract buyers for $100,000 and up homes.

Arlington Park Race Track reached a settlement with the village on the condition of the backstretch and barn areas in October. The dispute over the scheduling of replacing the existing wooden barns and dormitories caused the village, at one point, to consider shutting down the track operation.

The village-track pact, reached in October, calls for the Arlington Park to construct a 254-room concrete dormitory and installation of sprinklers in the 29 remaining wooden barns. New firewalls will be added to barns.

THE PROJECT, carrying a $1-million price tag, must be completed before the start of the 1976 racing season, according to the agreement.

The agreement was a compromise of an earlier accord which called for a small dormitory and a masonry barn to be built.

The planned construction meets the village and racing board's fire code. The board's fire code was in draft form when the settlement was reached.

The last fire at Arlington Park was in 1974. A juvenile later admitted setting the fire which destroyed one unoccupied barn. No one was injured in the blaze.

problems in 1974 when it anticipated $50,000 in building permit fee revenues but only realized about $35,000. Harwig said the decrease forced officials to make changes in the budget to reflect the lower collection.

In November 1975, the village had a total of $349,949 worth of construction under way. The figure is down from November 1974, when construction totaled $578,175.

The total amount of construction in Palatine through November 1975, including new homes, additions and repairs, totaled $5.28 million compared to $9.53 million for the same period in 1974.

Night voter signup set at township hall

The Palatine Township Hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd., will be open Monday nights through Jan. 30 for voter registration.

Monday night hours are 7 to 9 p.m. The office also will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Jan. 30, the last day the township will handle voter registration before the March 16 primary.

Registrants must have lived at their present address for 30 days, be 18 years old and a U.S. citizen in order to register.

These Cooties just love to bug veterans

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Smile when you call Carl Ekx a Cootie. It's not that he'll mind the term. He considers it a compliment.

That ugly green bug is a symbol of brotherhood to Ekx and other members of the Military Order of the Cooties, Des Plaines.

The bug is the official insignia of the national honorary auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars which prides itself on remembering forgotten soldiers — soldiers who are confined to veterans' hospitals with mental or physical disorders resulting from America's wars.

EKX, PRESIDENT of the group, says he knows their frustration and pain since he spent more than a year in rehabilitation following World War II.

He and about 30 other Cooties don't mind spending their free time entertaining and cheering up war veterans in local hospitals like Downey and Hines.

They also make sure that the wives and children of fellow vets have a roof over their heads and enough food on the table.

The Cooties take a light-hearted approach to being their brothers' keepers. Their humor is evident not only in the national organization's chosen name, but in the members' titles and uniforms.

The order was formed in 1920 as a social group for World War I veterans. The group soon turned its focus to brightening up the days of those who returned from the war on stretchers, he said.

"GUYS OFTEN got lice or cooties in their hair while they were fighting abroad. It was sort of comical, so we decided that it would be funny to have the cootie be the organization symbol," Ekx said.

The name was obviously an effective choice since it spurs a burst of laughter from most people, he said. And if that isn't enough, group members are given uncanny titles of command like Seam Squirrel, Blanket Bum and Hide Gimlet.

They wear bright red-and-white uniforms on their monthly visits to veterans' hospitals. Their shirts have a large cootie embroidered on the back, and gold tassels on Shriner-style caps.

"The uniforms are really enough to brighten up the room," Ekx said,

"but, we want to keep 'em smiling, and we'll do it any way that we can."

THE COOTIES of Pup Tent No. 28 in Des Plaines take their high spirits and humor to veterans' hospitals in the form of bingo games, belly dancers, live bands and other entertainment.

They often bring along playing cards, books, magazines, clothes and personal items for the hospital-bound vets, he said.

The Cooties also sponsor trips to professional baseball games and outings with the proceeds from fund-raising dinners and sales.

But, to many hospitalized vets, the greatest gift the Cooties bring each visit is conversation and companionship.

Guardsmen goal—a building corps can call home

EACH TIME the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps breaks into "Born Free" during its 1976 season, all members will pay tribute to Denise Tomaszewski, who died recently. The Guardsmen have also organized a special "comp guard" in honor of their deceased

by PAT GERLACH

Any member of the Guardsmen Drum and Bugle Corps can tell you a marching band isn't just 76 trombones in the big parade.

Hard work, long days of 10 to 12 hours of practice, immeasurable dedication and a vast number of headaches, mostly about money, go into the making of a top-notch award-winning drum corps.

The only reward comes when members are competing on a field or marching in a parade.

BUT THE closeness and kinship that develops among Guardsmen is a unique and enduring bond.

Near-family ties exist among corps members whether they live in neighboring communities of Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates or travel to weekly practice from more distant towns like Kankakee and Belleville, Ill., or Clinton, Iowa.

And that's why each time the corps breaks into "Born Free" this year, its 160 members will, as a single unit, pay personal tribute to a very special Guardsman.

The corps has dedicated its 1976 season to Denise Tomaszewski, who died last month of a rare form of malignancy not fully diagnosed until after her death. She had been a Guardsman for five years.

Denise's mother, Rosemarie Thomas of Hoffman Estates, says her 18-year-old daughter was "a real Guardsmen groupie" who made an appearance at drum corps practice only three days before her death, despite being critically ill and suffering intense pain at the time.

DENISE LIVED and breathed the corps, Mrs. Thomas said, adding that her daughter chose to attend the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater because it is a drum corps school.

Though Mrs. Thomas grieves at losing her oldest child, she talked easily about the family's dedication to the Guardsmen to whom two other members also belong.

"These young people really amaze me. They care so much for perfection it's unbelievable," Mrs. Thomas said, describing how the corps provided a full military funeral and graveside ceremony for her daughter while maintaining strict discipline.

THE GUARDSMEN Drum and Bugle Corps of Mount Prospect was established in 1961 "to provide a constructive program for the youth of the Northwest suburbs," a corps brochure says. The unit moved to the Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area three years ago and hopes eventually to establish a permanent base in one of the towns.

"I guess you could say our ultimate hope is a building, probably rented, that we could really call 'Guardsmen Hall,' a facility that would be used for performances, practice, concerts, let alone a storage area for our equipment," Mrs. Thomas said.

Denise was buried on a late November Monday, the day drum corps practices are held, and Mrs. Thomas tells of attending that night's practice to "cheer the corps" and thank members. She also told them the family had established a memorial fund in Denise's name.

"The money we have received will be used to help some of the young people who have had to forsake trips to competitions because they just didn't have the money," she said.

The corps has an annual budget of from $50,000 to $60,000 which comes from funds raised privately, except for support from several groups which serve as token sponsors.

THE BALANCE of money comes from special fundraisers and $7 monthly dues from each member, though Mrs. Thomas points out the Guardsmen are always in need of money.

Full uniforms and musical instruments are provided by the corps without charge.

Last year the corps was chosen, primarily for its bright orange and black uniforms, for a Kentucky Fried Chicken television commercial which brought in an $8,000 windfall.

"We were grateful for the money, but it just didn't go too far because we had to pay corps members wages who took time off from jobs during the filming," Mrs. Thomas said.

She said the corps has "reluctantly" been forced to establish a $75-per-member fee for a travel fund, used to pay expenses during each summer when the corps travels to Philadelphia, Denver and elsewhere for competition.

"Many of these people are young, 14 and under and don't have jobs, so it can be rough," Mrs. Thomas said.

Just days after Denise's death, the corps learned it could use a vacant warehouse in Schaumburg-Centex Industrial Park until the facility is rented.

Truman-MacArthur feud

Old Soldier's last battle recalled

by MIKE KLEIN

Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.

Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman?

That is for American historians to decide.

More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.

IT WAS NEWS this week.

On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Missourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide

Col. Laurence Bunker.

Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.

"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.

Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.

Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.

"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.

"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.

"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."

Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June 1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.

"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.

Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.

"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.

MacARTHUR thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."

The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.

Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."

Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearcut winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate.

Shop owner fears ripoff, nabs suspect in burglary

Alfred Wood was worried about burglars breaking into his Des Plaines business, and so Friday night he stayed overnight in his garage and caught a burglary suspect.

Wood, 44, was awakened about 9:30 a.m. Saturday by noises at the garage door of Red Wood Service, 1222 Harding Ave. The door opened, and a man entered, saw Wood and fled, police said.

Wood went outside and fired a warning gunshot into the air to stop the fleeing suspect, but the man kept running, police reported. A second man was discovered near a car just outside the garage, and Wood ordered him to drive him to the police station, police said.

The suspect who fled was later arrested. He was identified as Craig A. Busch, 17, of 1312 Perry St., Des Plaines. He was charged with burglary. The other man, John C. Thompson, 28, of 1648 River Rd., Des Plaines, was charged with attempted burglary.

Wood told police he had noticed Thursday someone had tampered with the door lock to his business.

Busch and Thompson were released after posting $1,500 bond each pending appearances Feb. 6 in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

'Chec-mate' gets backing of Chamber

The Mount Prospect Chamber of Commerce will sponsor Chec-mate, a citizen effort designed to report crime and vandalism in the village.

Police Chief Ralph J. Doney said the program will allow residents to report crimes to the police without giving their names. This will serve as protection for residents who fear that vandals may retaliate against those who call the police.

Residents participating in the program are given a number, which they can use to identify themselves when reporting crimes. The name of the person will remain confidential, and the person will be contacted only if testimony is needed in court.

C. O. SCHLAVER, executive director of the chamber, said his organization will keep the list of names and numbers. "It's going to take some time to work out the details," Schlaver said.

The chamber will finance the initial phase of the program, which includes the printing of a brochure and registration form. Doney said Explorer Scouts will distribute the brochures to village residents.

"There is no training needed to participate in the program," Doney said. He said Chec-mate will be fully explained in the brochure.

The Chec-mate program is the latest in a series of proposals designed to make it easier for residents to report crimes. Recently, the village began Stop-Alert, a special citizens patrol which relies on volunteers to radio potential crimes to the police station.

STOP-ALERT went into effect last month, and the program has already been credited with aiding in the apprehension of two vandals at Prospect High School.

The village soon will be launching a crime prevention bureau which will instruct citizens how to report and prevent crime. Two officers will be assigned to the bureau on a full-time basis.

Doney said the Chec-mate program has been effective in several communities, including Hoffman Estates, where the project is sponsored by the Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates.

Schools weigh tax referendum

The Mount Prospect Dist. 57 Board of Education is considering a tax increase referendum to help relieve the financial impact of declining enrollment in the district.

The board met Saturday to study an ad hoc committee's recommendation that it consider closing Sunset Park School. The ad hoc committee was formed to study the impact of declining enrollment in the district and the resulting loss of state aid.

"I don't like a referendum, but it may be what we have to do," Edith Freund, board member said.

Mrs. Freund and other board members said a referendum, however, must not be seen as an alternative to the closing of Sunset Park.

"IT SHOULD not be sold to the community as a means of saving Sunset School or any other school from being closed," Mrs. Freund said.

She criticized the ad hoc committee for "not proposing an over-all plan to ease the district's financial difficulties."

She said the closing of one school without measures to increase revenue was hasty and irresponsible.

The board discussed a tax referendum calling for a 30-cent per $100 assessed valuation tax increase. The district tax rate is now $2.20 per $100 assessed valuation.

Board Pres. Peter Olesen, ad hoc committee chairman, defended the committee's report. He said it contained a long list of alternative measures and recommended further study by the board to relieve problems associated with the drop in enrollment.

HE SAID the committee did not specifically recommend closing Sunset School "but only that the consideration of closing the school has sufficient merit to warrant further study."

"We don't have enough information to decide one way or the other," Olesen said.

The board appeared split on a decision to close Sunset School. Some members said the Illinois General Assembly "will bail" out the district and others like it who are suffering financial problems because of declining enrollment.

Others on the board said they would prefer the referendum route to assure the district additional operating funds.

ALTHOUGH THE meeting was called to discuss the Sunset Park School closing, members also were concerned with formulating an over-all plan for action to avoid bankruptcy.

Olesen said he will ask the board to accept the ad hoc committee report at the next board meeting.

Olesen said he is not forcing a vote on the report's recommendations and said the report can be accepted without endorsing it.

The board in December declined to accept the report or its recommendations and asked for further review of the information.

Has Walker lost his touch?

Governor rebuffed by some, others glad to shake his hand

by JERRY THOMAS

Gov. Daniel Walker made his first campaign swing through the Northwest suburbs this weekend but missed several of his scheduled stops because of time problems.

Over-all, where the governor did stop he was met with mixed reactions from local voters.

Some shoppers snubbed Walker during his "handshake tour," while others felt it was a thrill to shake the governor's hand and pledge their support to his reelection bid.

As he strode through Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect and Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg an advance group of his campaign workers handed out Walker buttons and asked shoppers if they wanted to greet the man from Springfield.

"NO THANK YOU" was a common reply, but there were some people who were awed by the governor and happy to shake his hand.

One Elk Grove Village man received the heartiest handshake of the day from a beaming Walker when the man complimented the governor on his "courageous veto of the school appropriations bill."

Alan Stewart, 64 Woodcrest St., told Walker, "I want you to know that some of us who give our time as volunteers in the educational field agree with your courageous decision."

Stewart, a member of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59's School Community Council, stressed his comments "are my personal point of view and not the council's." He told the governor the district actively opposed the veto. "But there are many of us in education who believe more money does not always mean better education," Stewart said.

Dorothy Schaul, 1103 Fern Dr., Mount Prospect, pledged a vote for Walker and said, "I told you in the last campaign I'd vote for you and I think you are doing a good job."

JOYCE ANTONSON, 1405 S. Birch St., Mount Prospect, was one of many area residents that missed the governor because Walker missed three scheduled stops.

Mrs. Antonson and her son, Glenn, waited for more than two hours for Walker to make an appearance when she was finally informed he would not be stopping at her location because of last-minute time problems.

"I still wish him luck in his campaign," she said.

Her son, however, was not as forgiving. He said "If he can't be on time he shouldn't be governor."

Old Soldier's last battle recalled

by MIKE KLEIN

Harry Truman shafted Douglas MacArthur.

Or, was it Douglas MacArthur who shafted Harry Truman?

That is for American historians to decide.

More than two decades after then-President Truman relieved five-star U. S. Army Gen. MacArthur of duty, coals still burn hot when the incident becomes public again.

IT WAS NEWS this week.

On Jan. 4, ABC-TV aired "Collision Course," featuring Henry Fonda as MacArthur with E. G. Marshall portraying Truman, the tough Missourian.

By Monday afternoon, United Press International reported that some facts in "Collision Course" were distorted, according to former MacArthur Aide

Col. Laurence Bunker.

Col. Bunker said there was "absolutely no truth" to the story that Truman ordered MacArthur to land his plane at Wake Island when the two American giants held their first conference.

"Collision Course" portrayed Truman as insisting that MacArthur's plane would land first as both parties approached Wake Island.

THE FILM AND commentary which have followed this week revived memories for Burt Showers, student activities coordinator at Forest View High School.

Thirty years ago, Showers drew maps for MacArthur and stayed with the general's headquarters staff through occupation of Tokyo as World War II ended on the Pacific Front.

Showers, who taught history at Palatine High School during Korean War years, vividly recalls his thoughts when Truman relieved MacArthur.

"I thought Truman shafted my boss and I felt that way for a long time," said Showers, who rose to staff sergeant in planning and operations under MacArthur.

"I suppose you could say it was a degree of youthful loyalty that my leader had gotten zapped," he said.

"I'VE NEVER DENIED Truman the constitutional right of doing it. None of us will ever really know what happened between Truman and MacArthur."

Showers' assignment to MacArthur's headquarters dated from June

Child behavior topic of Alphonsus meet

Tony Jones, child psychologist from Torch Clinic, will be the featured speaker at today's 8 p.m. meeting of the St. Alphonsus Home and School Assn.

Jones will discuss child behavior problems in the school, how the parents can deal with the problems, and how to help the child.

The school is at 411 N. Wheeling Rd., Prospect Heights.

1944 through Jan. 10, 1946. Showers joined the general's staff in Australia. They moved north through New Guinea, the Philippines and finally, into Tokyo, Japan.

"I drew a lot of those maps," Showers said of the final troop movement that saw MacArthur enter Japan.

Showers remembers that MacArthur, who died in April 1964 at 84 years old, was polite, courteous and "a tremendous general" who surrounded himself with intelligent and efficient subordinate officers.

"Being a military man, I don't think MacArthur saw the state department's position of a limited war," Showers said in reference to the general's wishes for an escalated effort in Korea.

MacARTHUR thought you went into a war to win," Showers said. "He couldn't buy a police action. This was the problem between him and Truman."

The general was an enormously popular military leader stateside. He clashed with an equally stubborn Truman who never shied away from responsibility or decisions.

Power butted heads with power. As Showers said, "When you get two people like that together, someone's got to bend."

Showers holds the opinion that there will never be a clearcut winner or loser in the Truman-MacArthur debate.

July 4th parade meeting tonight

There's a meeting tonight for participants in Mount Prospect's giant Bicentennial Fourth of July parade. Chairman Ben Trapezi will call the meeting to order in the Lions Park Fieldhouse, 411 S. Maple, at 8 p.m. All groups, organizations, businesses, churches, who expect to be part of the Independence Day parade should be represented.

At 7:30 p.m., before the parade planning session, films of Mount Prospect's big 50th anniversary parade in 1967 will be shown. Those who are interested are invited to come early to attend the showing.

ST. PAUL Lutheran Church has an interesting project for this Bicentennial year. An Archives Committee is collecting congregational memorabilia relative to the church's history. Charter members and their families have been contacted as well as other early members to gather pictures and information.

The Archives Committee plans to display the material it gathers as part of the Bicentennial celebration.

DAVID AND Shirley Larson, 702 N. Russel St., celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary recently at a dinner with two members of their bridal party present. The maid of honor and an usher, Alice and Charles Bretz, are now married to each other and live across the street from the Larsons at 623 N. Russel.

The Larsons have two children who also attended the celebration dinner held at the Barn in Barrington. Son Craig, 18, was home for the event from Iowa State University. Anita, 10, attends Fairview School.

The Larsons were married at Bethany Evangelical and Reformed Church in Chicago. The Bretzs married three months after the Larsons and soon will be celebrating their silver anniversary.
